PREFACE.

This work is an humble attempt to provide a concise Dictionary of terms used in the works of Political Science, Constitutionalism, Governmental and Administrative systems of various Countries, and International law etc. etc. With the growth of Political consciousness in our country, after the advent of independence, such a work, giving explanation and definitions of the Political and Governmental terms with their Hindi equivalents, has become a vital necessity. With this view, I have undertaken the compilation of the present work, giving up-to-date Political terms with their definitions in the light of the English, American and Indian authorities on the subject. I have also attempted to include the terms used in the Political Philosophy of Mahatma Gandhi with their explanations mostly in his own language. Besides this, terms used in Draft Constitution of India as well as in the Constitutions of England, United States of America, U. S. S. R., China and other countries have also been dealt with.

In keeping track of developments of Political Science and constitutionalism, I have used the latest authorities on the subject and made them the basis of the definitions and meanings of the words used in this volume. I am giving the list of the books from which I have derived help and take opportunity to express my heartfelt gratitude to the learned authors of the same.

I shall be grateful, if the learned readers, would very kindly give me suggestions for improvement in the work, so that I may make necessary additions and alterations in the second edition of this dictionary.

In conclusion I wish to express my thanks to Shri Dindayalji Mathur, Manager of Newal Kishore Press for the interest he has taken in the decent printing of the work.

(2) A person sent by one Sovereign power to another with authority, by letters of Credence, to treat on affairs of state.

In ancient India, we have traces of diplomatic agents from very early times—from the time of the Rigveda. Thus we have a passage in the Rigveda in which AGNI discharged the functions of an ambassador.

In the Mahabharat, Bhishma says "An ambassador should possess these seven accomplishments, Viz. he should be high born, of a good family, eloquent, clever, sweet-speeched, faithful in delivering messages with which he is charged, and endowed with good memory.

Manu says: An Ambassador is commended to a king who is loyal, honest, skilful, possessing a good memory, who knows the proper place and time for action and who is handsome, fearless and eloquent.

The Agni Purana repeats the same thing.

"The ambassador sent to represent the king at a foreign court should be a man of very keen intellect, sweet voiced, possessing eloquence of speech and well-versed in the art of diplomacy.

In ancient Greece the PROXENOI who had experience of foreign affairs were frequently sent on important diplomatic errands.

Everywhere in antiquity the person of the ambassador was regarded inviolable. The Mahabharat is very emphatic in its denunciation of sovereigns who committed the sin of killing an envoy. 'A king should never slay an envoy under any circumstances. That King who slays an envoy sinks into hell with all his ministers'. (Shanti Parva).

According to modern International law a diplomatic envoy during the time of his residence and until he leaves the country, is entitled to an entire exemption from the local jurisdiction, both civil and criminal. Besides this, the Ambassador has many privileges, including precedence at state ceremonies and direct access to the ruler. In Great Britain they are usually selected from the diplomatic services.

The duties of an ambassador is to keep his own Government informed of the state of affairs in the country to which he is sent, and to convey to that country the opinion and wishes of his own Government on matters of mutual concern. राजदूत ।

Anarchism. This word is derived from Greek ANARCHIA (non-rule). It is a political doctrine standing for the abolition of every organised authority and state machinery, and the creation of a stateless society instead. Philosophically it is based on the principle of absolute liberty and the negation of government authority in the inter-relations of individuals united in society. Anarchist philosophy places the social ideal in the absolute reign of individualism, and dreams of a model society in which all individuals will be so enlightened, conscientious and inspired by feelings of equality and fraternity as to live in perfect harmony, without the necessity of governmental machinery, - legislation, prisons or police. It is a dream which the best of men and the noblest thinkers have dreamt, but which presupposes the complete change of human nature.

(2) It should always be noted here that pure and philosophical anarchism rests on non-violence. Secret murders and other violent acts are not consistent with the high principles of anarchism.

(3) It is described by Kropatkin, its chief literary exponent, as a principle or theory of life and conduct under which society is conceived without government. Harmony in such a society being obtained not by submission to law, or by obedience to any authority, but by free agreements concluded between the various groups, territorial and professional, freely constituted for the sake of production and consumption, as also for the satisfaction of the infinite variety of needs and aspirations of a civilized being (Joad—Modern Political Theory).

Aristocracy. (Gr. Aristos, best, Kratein to rule). It literally means Government by the best, or by a select class possessing a real or alleged superiority. A governing body composed of the best men in the state.

Artistocracy may be of various kinds; it may be aristocracy of wealth, or it may be military aristocracy. According to Aristotle's classification, aristocracy is a normal type of government the perversion of which is oligarchy, or the rule of the few for their own interest.

One of the distinguishing characteristics of aristocracy is that it emphasizes quality rather than quantity, character rather than numbers. It assumes that some are better fitted to govern than others, attaches great weight to experience and training as political virtues and seeks to reward special talent and attract it into the public service. अभिजात-तंत्र, कुलीन तंत्र, शिष्टशासन ।

Atomic Bomb. An extremely powerful engine of destruction perfected in 1945 and first used in the closing days of the war with Japan. Two were dropped from United States aeroplanes over Japanese cities. The first is estimated to have destroyed from 70,000 to 120,000 human beings in Hiroshima and to have seriously injured some 200,000 others. The second was dropped on Nagasaki, a few days later, and killed from 40,000 to 45,000 human being and injured some 40,000 others. The only limitation on the production of these bombs, apart from the temporary monopoly of the knowledge of manufacturing them possessed by United States, is their extreme costliness. In course of time this will, however, be reduced. The effectiveness of these instruments of destruction will, it is anticipated, be at the same time increased, and the possibility of the destruction of present day civilization by means of them has been contemplated. On the other hand it is claimed that the discoveries, if put to other uses, could raise the standard of living immeasurably in all countries. Uranium (q. v.) is essential for the production of atomic energy. परमाणु-बम ।

Attorney-General (in U. S. A.) The Attorney-General in the United States of America is sufficiently different from his English prototype to need a word of explanation. He is not only public prosecutor and standing counsel for the United States, but also to some extent, what is called in European continent, a minister of justice. He has a general oversight—it can hardly be described as a control, of the Federal judicial departments, and especially of the prosecuting officers called district attorneys, and executive court officers called United States Marshals. He is the legal adviser of the President in those delicate questions necessarily frequent under the constitution of the United States, which arise as to the limit of the executive power and the relations of Federal to State Authority, and generally in all legal matters. His opinions are frequently published officially, as a justification of the President's conduct, and an indication of the view which the executive takes of its legal position and duties in a pending matter. (Bryce—American Commonwealth).

Balanced Constitution. The fathers of the American Constitution entertained a lively suspicion of the officers of the Government.

To guard against the usurpation of powers by any one organ of Government, they not only made the constitution supreme, but also provided a number of checks or balances. These checks and balances were devised to secure the sovereignty of the people. संतुलित संविधान।

Balance of Power. It means the preservation, especially in Europe, of an equality of strength between countries or groups of countries.

The Theory of Balance of Power. The theory of the "Balance of Power" is based on the equilibrium of forces. It has been responsible for the maintenance of standing armies, for wearisome negotiations and for incessant wars. In most states of antiquity the principle of the balance of power was understood and often applied in practice. Hume in his Essay* traced the history of the theory of the balance of power to the Orient. "It is a question" said he, "whether the idea of the balance of power be owing entirely to modern policy, or whether the phrase only has been invented in later ages." Hume had before him the historic example of Greece only as perhaps representing the "Magic East" and he came to the conclusion that to whatever causes we attribute the shifting of sides in all the Grecian republics, to jealous emulation or cautious politics, the effects were alike, and every prevailing power was sure to meet with a confederacy against it, and that often composed of its former friends and allies. The Peloponnesian league on the eve of the great Peloponnesian War complained not so much against the specific faults of commission or omission of the Athenian Empire as of her rapid growth of power and her concealed desire to undermine the autonomous independence of the Greek† City States. The Story of the foundation and the decline of the ephemeral Spartan empire in Greece after the peace of Antalcidas only confirmed the proposition laid down by Hume. Demosthenes's oration for the Megalapolitans shows a refined sense of the theory of the balance of Power. Shortly after the peace of Callias, envoys from Megalapolis as well as Sparta reached Athens, each of them urging the Athenians to enter into an alliance with it. The Spartans reminded the Athenians of their old alliance between them against their common foe of Thebes. Demosthenes, however, took the side of the Megalapolitans and laid great stress on the fact that neither Sparta nor Thebes should be allowed to jeopardize the balance of power. "No man," said he, "will deny that it is for the advantage of Athens that both the Lacedaemonians and our Theban neighbours should be weak. But if we may form a conjecture from representations repeatedly made in our assembly, it appears that things are thus circumstanced—the Thebans will be weakened by the re-establishment of Orchomenus, Thespieae and Plataea: the Lacedaemonians will become powerful again, if we subdue Arcadia and take Megalapolis. We must therefore mind that we suffer, not the one people, to grow mighty and formidable before the other has become weak. That the power of Lacedaemon does not increase unobserved by us, in a greater degree than it is well for that of Thebes to be reduced. For we shall hardly say that we would have the Lacedaemonians as our rivals rather than the Thebans. Our solicitude is not concerned with this merely, for we are anxious that neither of them may have the means of injuring us, and so shall we enjoy the best security". ‡Demosthenes's oration failed to convince his countrymen. The result was Chaeronea, the empire of Macedon and the end of the politeia in Hellas. The City State succumbed to the Country State.

In the history of Rome we do not find a clear enunciation of this doctrine of political equilibrium. Rome's advance was sure, her military successes were brilliant, her general policy and diplomatic conduct were subtle and all the states of the then civilised world fell a prey to the Roman policy of "divide it impera". The theory of the balance of power however had feeble illustration in Hiero. II, King of Syracuse, and exerted the warm admiration of Polybius

Wars of the balance of power have devastated the fair countries of Europe many a time; the triple alliance fought Louis XIV successfully. The Policy of Ferdinand followed by Richelieu and Mazarin was to remain Catholick at home and Protestant abroad so as to prevent the formation of a coalition against France. Louis XIV in his lust of ambition departed from that traditional French Policy and the result was Utrecht and the years of tortuous European diplomacy. Napoleon I and Napoleon III and lastly, the Kaiser Wilhelm threatened the supposed "finely equiposed" balance of power in Europe and the result is what all the world knows.

The theory of the balance of power held a very prominent place in ancient Indian State Craft. Thus the preservation of the balance of power by an ideal king was strongly advised by Manu.

"By all the (four) expedients a polite king must arrange (matters so) that neither friends, nor neutrals, nor foes are superior to himself".

Just as Sovereignty is possible only with assistance—as a single wheel can never move—so the ideal king was to place himself at the centre to hold the balance of states in his hands (P. Bandopadhyaya). शक्ति संतुलन; शक्ति-सामञ्जस्य।

Bicameral System. That form of Government which consists of two separate houses, the concurrence of both ordinarily being essential to the enactment of any legislation.

According to Garner the advantages of second chamber may be summarized as follows: First, it serves as a check upon hasty, rash and ill-considered legislation. Legislative assemblies are often subject to strong passions and excitements are sometimes impatient, impetuous and careless. The function of the second chamber is to restrain such tendencies and to compel careful consideration of legislative projects.

Describing the advantages of the second chamber, Chancellor Kent, says— "One great object of the separation of the legislature into two houses acting separately and with co-ordinate powers is to destroy the evil effects of sudden and strong excitement and of precipitate measures springing from passion, caprice, prejudice, personal influence and party intrigue, which have been found by sad experience to exercise a potent and dangerous sway in single assemblies.

"The necessity of two chamber," says Bryce, "is based on the belief that the innate tendency of an assembly is to become hateful, tyrannical and corrupt, and needs to be checked by the existence of another house of equal authority".

Secondly it affords protection to the individual against the despotism of a single chamber.

A third advantage of a bi-cameral system is that it gives representation to special interests or classes in the State and particularly to the aristocratic portions of society, in order to counter-balance the undue preponderance of the popular element in one of the chambers, thus introducing into the legislature a conservative force to curb the radicalism of the popular chamber. John Stuart Mill, Sidwick, M. Duguit, Montesquieu, Bluntschli, Judge Story and some others advocated the necessity of second chamber.

In spite of all these advantages claimed on behalf of bi-cameralism, there has been recently a tendency to drift towards the argument for a single chambered assembly, and it has been said that advantages of a single chamber assembly, under modern conditions, more than counter-balance the disadvantages. The bi-cameral principle, therefore, has been the target of attack by some political thinkers. Laski, an eminent modern authority on politics, devoted a number of pages in his "Studies in Law and Politics" on the disadvantages of bicameralism and strongly supported one-chamber-system. द्विसभा प्रणाली; द्विभवन-प्रणाली ।

Bi-Cameral System, Hereditary. Hereditary second chambers are relics of the medieval system of government. At the beginning of the present century, there were hereditary second chambers in England, Austria, Hungary. With the exception of the British House of Lords all other purely hereditary second chambers have been swept away by the war.

(2) A term applied to the social doctrine upon the basis of which the Russian Soviet Republic was established in 1917. The term is the result of an incident. At the Socialist congress held in London in 1903 a split occurred among the members of the Russian Social Democratic Party (founded in 1884 by Plekhnov, Deutsch, and Axelrod). It broke into factions :—the Bolsheviki or majorities, headed by Lenin, and the Mensheviki or minorities, whose leaders were Plekhanov, Martov, and Dahri. The followers of Lenin were in a majority and thus became known as the Bolsheviki. When they triumphed in 1917 under Lenin and Trotsky, the doctrine of Bolshevism received a great momentum. It aimed at nationalisation of the means of production, disestablishment of the church, and in general the abolition of Capitalist system. बोलशेविक मत; उग्र साम्यवाद ।

Bourgeoisie. A term referring etymologically to the old class of freemen or burgess residents in town. The population of the region for miles round resolved not to have anything to do with him, and as far as they could prevent, not to allow any one else to have anything to do with him. His servants fled from him. No one could work for him. No one could supply him with food. Bureaucracy. A system of Government which is composed of administrators especially trained for the public service, who enter the employ of the Government only after a regular course of study and examination, and who serve usually during good behaviour and retire on pension (Garner).

Under such a system the governmental service acquires the character of a profession, its officials are subject to rigid discipline, and they tend to acquire an esprit de-corps some what similar to that found among the soldiers of a regular army. They devote their entire time to the discharge of their public duties and have no other occupation. They therefore tend to become a class apart from the rest of the population, possessing different ideals and interests. In a large measure such government is irresponsible to the people and is little affected by public opinion. It is marked by excessive formalism, and has a tendency to over emphasize administrative routine rather than conditions and principles. It tends, as Burke remarked, to think more of forms than of substance.

Certainly it has got some merits, the chief of which is that it represents high skill and ability. Its officials are pecially trained for the public service. It is thus more efficient and economic. If administration were the only or the main end of the Government, little fault could be found with such a system. But it may be noted that efficiency of administration is not the sole end to be attained in any civilized governmental system. The education of the people in political matters, the stimulation of popular interest in public affairs and the cultivation of patriotism on the part of the masses, the promotion of the virtue and intelligence of the people should be among the important aims of every political system, and this can not be accomplished by the bureaucratic system. It is not favourable to the development of loyalty to the nation or humanity, patriotism and self reliance. Moreover it is not without defects inherent in its own nature. "The disease" said Mill, "which afflicts bureaucratic government and of which they die is routine. They perish by the mutability of their maxims and still more by the universal law that whatever becomes a routine loses its vital principle". Such a government, he said tends to become a 'pendantocracy'. It is the Government, someone has remarked, for which the philosopher can find no defence. अधिकारतन्त्र; नौकरशाही।

Cabinet. In the English political system the cabinet is the head of the executive as well as the directing power in the legislature. The Cabinet is chosen from the Political party, which commands the majority in the house of commons. The head of the cabinet, the Prime Minister, is appointed by the King and after his appointment he selects his ministers who also are technically appointed by the King. The cabinet is representative of both the House of Lords and House of Commons, but is responsible only to the House of commons. As a rule it includes the heads of the chief executive departments of the Government. Though the Prime Minister can exercise his own will in the matter of choice, he is bound to select the chief men of the political party in power. The cabinet is jointly responsible to the House of Commons for the action of its individual members and in the case of defeat by the House, the Cabinet must resign. The Cabinet, moreover, has the power through the Prime Minister, to advise the King to dissolve the House of Commons. Although the Cabinet is but a committee of the Legislature, it really is its master (Gilchrist's Principles of Political Science). मंत्रि-मंडल; सचिव-मंडल।

Cabinet (U. S. R). In the United States of America the cabinet consists of the following officials. (1) Secretary of State, (2) Secretary of the Treasury,

(3) Secretary of War, (4) Attorney General, (5) Secretary of the Navy, (6) Post Master-General, (7) Secretary of the Interior, and (8) Secretary of Agriculture. These eight now make up what the Cabinet is. Each receives a salary of 8000/- (£. 1600). All are appointed by the president, subject to the consent of the Senate (which is practically never refused), and may be removed by the President alone. Nothing marks them off from any other officials who might be placed in charge of a department, except that they are summoned by the President to his Private Council. None of them can vote in congress. Art. XI6 of the Constitution providing that 'No person holding any office under the United States shall be a member of either House during his continuance in Office'.

This restriction, according to Bryce, was intended to prevent the President from merely from winning over individual members of Congress by the allurements of office, but also from making his ministers' agents in corrupting or unduly influencing the representatives of the people.

The President has the amplest range of choice for his ministers. He usually forms an entirely new cabinet when he enters office, even if he belongs to the same party as his predecessor.

It is this body that decides upon the executive and administrative policies and the Ministers and their subordinates put these policies and the laws of the land into effect. On the other hand, the Cabinet members also direct individually and collectively the entire work of legislation. Although private members may submit bills in either house, it is an unwritten rule that measures of large importance will receive the serious attention of the houses only if they have the active support of the Cabinet. In fact, private bills, if they deal with large or controversial matters, have very little chance of being passed. मन्त्रिमण्डल की स्थिति ।

Cabinet and Ministry There is a distinction between the Ministry and the Cabinet in English constitution. The ministers—some forty or more in number, are the chiefs of the executive departments, among which the administration of the country is divided, including also the parliamentary under-secretaries who are not heads of departments. The cabinet on the contrary consists simply of those members of the King's ministry who are summoned (by the Prime Minister) to attend cabinet meetings (Readlich's Parliamentary procedure Vol. I). Communism. The Social movement which claims to put an end to the capitalist system and private ownership with the object of establishing a dictatorship of the proletariat. It also maintains the right of the state to control production, distribution and consumption, and an equitable division of labour.

The communist creed was based on strict Marxism interpreted by Lenin. Its philosophy is materialistic. It demands not only common ownership of the means of production, but also common enjoyment of the goods of consumption.

Modern communism gained great political importance as the creed of governing party which obtained power under the leadership of Lenin in the second phase of the Russian revolution (October 1917). It was constituted a world movement by the establishment of the Third International in 1919. Recently, in 1943, Stalin abolished this third International for the reasons of political expediency.

Communism as a social system is not a new idea, as it has existed since times immemorial. The earliest form of property was evidently communistic. Communism, or life in common, was practised by the Essenes and the Therapeutea and by the Early Christian Church.

Among the ancient philosophers Aristototele and Plato were in favour of communism. After the Reformation, communist communities were established in Germany, and several experiments were made in the United States during the 18th & 19th Centuries. Communism was advocated in France by Mably, Morelli, cabet and saint-simon. In England Robert Owen advocated the cause of communism. Ministers are not the members of the congress and its legislation may be pronounced as invalid by the supreme court. The president can veto its legislation, but congress can overcome this by passing the voted measure again by two thirds majority.

Dicey, the greatest authority on British Constitution, defines a constitution as "the product of all rules which directly or indirectly affects the distribution or the exercise of the sovereign powers in the State." Sir James Macintosh remarks—"By the constitution of a state I mean the body of those written or unwritten fundamental laws which regulate the most important rights of the higher magistrates and the most essential privileges of the subjects. (Laws of Nature and of nations).

Charles Borgeaud, a high authority on the subject of constitutions, gives the following definition—"A constitution is the fundamental law according to which the government of the states is organized and agreeable to which the relations of individuals, or moral persons to the community are determined. It may be a written instrument, a precise text or series of texts enacted at a given time by a sovereign power". 'A constitution in the American sense of the word' said Mr. Justice Miller, 'is a written instrument by which the fundamental powers of government are established, limited and defined, and by which those powers are distributed among several departments for their more safe and useful exercise for the benefit of the body politic' (Quoted by Morse in his "Citizenship by birth and Naturalization"). संविधान, राजकीय संगठन, शासन-विधान, राज्यघटना, विधान नियम ।

Constitution, American. Section I of article I of the Constitution of the United States of America, adopted in 1787, declares that "All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a congress of the United States, which shall consist of a senate and a House of Representatives".

The words "herein granted" reveal the fact that the Federal Legislature (Congress) is not the sovereign power but shares much of its sovereignty with the states and the people as a whole, and in fact derives its power solely from the people.

Sovereignty in America resides in the people as a whole and all the instruments of American Government are in the last resort made by the people. Article 4, section 4, clearly imposes a further obligation in relation to the component units of the United States of America namely the states.

"The United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion.

Thus it may be said that all the states in the Union are autonomous republics, their powers and functions being specified by the constitution. The division of functions between the state government and federal government is based roughly on the principle that subjects of general interests, having application to the Federation as a whole are administered by the Federal Government while subjects in which the various states are individually interested are administered by state governments. अमेरिका का संविधान।

Constitution, Stalin. On the initiative of Comrade Stalin, the Central committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, at its meeting in February, 1935, passed a resolution to amend the Constitution of the U. S. S. R.

Accordingly, the Congress instructed the Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R. to set up a Constitution Committee for the purpose of drafting the amended constitution. On February 7, 1935, the Central Executive Committee elected a Constitution Committee with Stalin as the Chairman.

The drafting of the Constitution proved to be a lengthy process but at last the final plenary meeting of the Constitution Committee took place on May 15, 1936, under Comrade Stalin's Chairmanship.

The Committee carefully examined the draft of the Constitution that was submitted by the drafting sub-committee approved its final wording and decided to submit it to the next session of the Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R.

On June 11, 1936, the Presidium of the Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R. heard the report of the Chairman of the Constitution Committee and approved the draft that it submitted. The Presidium decided to convene an All Union Congress of Soviets in November 25, 1936 to discuss the draft constitution of the U. S. S. R. and it also decided to publish the draft for Nation wide discussion.

The Draft Constitution did indeed become the subject of Nation-wide discussion at thousands of meetings of working people, in News-Paper and magazine articles, in the course of which a number of addenda and amendments were proposed. In his report at the Congress of Soviets, Stalin stated that the Nation-wide discussion has been extremely useful in drawing up the final text of the constitution.

The Eighth Extraordinary All Union Congress of Soviets of the U. S. S. R. met on November 25, 1936.

There was only one item on the Agenda—the draft Constitution of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

After discussing Comrade Stalin's report on the draft submitted by the Constitution Committee, the Eighth Extraordinary All Union Congress of Soviets, on December 1, 1936 approved of the draft and accepted it as a basis and set up a drafting committee of 220 members to discuss the amendment and addenda which has been proposed and to decide on the final text. The committee was instructed to submit to the Congress its final draft within three days.

On December 5, 1936, after hearing a report by Comrade Stalin as Chairman of the drafting Committee, the congress ratified the constitution (Fundamental Law) of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

This is how the new Constitution of the U. S. S. R. came into being. The people named it 'Stalin Constitution', and by that name it has gone into history, for its birth is inseparably connected with Stalin's name.

The adoption of the constitution was a new landmark in the historical developments of the U. S. S. R. It introduced complete equality for all citizens and consistently applied the principle of democratic centralism to all the links of Soviet system. Granting all citizens of the U. S. S. R. extensive rights and democratic liberties, the constitution at the same time guaranteed the ability to exercise these rights and liberties by providing all the material means needed for the purpose.

The new constitution still further consolidated the State-system based on the fraternity of nations. It provided for a form of organization of the power

It consists largely of a mass of customs, usages, and judicial decisions, together with a smaller body of statutory enactments of a fundamental character, usually bearing different dates (Garner).

The best example of an unwritten constitution is that of Great Britain. According to Bountmy, a brilliant French Scholar, it is undoubtedly the first of all free constitutions in age, in importance and in originality,' (Constitutional studies). अलिखित संविधान; अलिखित विधान ।

Constitution, Written. A written constitution is one in which most of the provisions are embodied in a formally enacted written instrument or instruments. Crown. (1) The Government of the United Kingdom is, in theory, an absolute monarchy, in form, a limited or constitutional monarchy and in actual working, a democratic republic. The Sovereign stands at the head of that system. In theory, he is the supreme executive, the source of all laws, the fountain of justice and honour, the commander in-chief of the army, the navy and the air force. All land is held by him directly or indirectly. Parliament exists by his will and right to vote for a member depends upon his grant.

The Sovereign, in reality, possessed these and many other privileges for centuries. To-day, they have little or no political importance. He is the supreme executive only in name and has very little to do with the composition of Parliament. On the other hand the powers of the Crown are extensive.

(2) The Crown in Constitutional Law is merely an abstraction for the King in his official capacity. The King is a natural person and the Crown is a legal abstraction. The Crown is a supreme executive authority, the King is its physical embodiment". Mr. Gladstone once remarked that there is no distinction more vital to the practice of the British Constitution than that which exists between the King and the Crown, between the monarch as an individual and monarchy as an institution. It is a distinction which is often neglected by Englishmen themselves, for the laws of the British Constitution pay no regard to it. So in every day speech the English people attribute to their King as an individual many prerogatives which belong to the office that he holds. These prerogatives belong to an institution known as 'the Crown'—an institution which might just as well be called the Chief Executive, or the Nation or the Will of the People. (Sir Sidney Low, The Governance of England).

Democracy, Athenian. In the ancient world democracy had the fullest development at Athens. In the age of Pericles the popular assemblies, known as the Ecclesia became actually the governing and not merely the electing and controlling body. All the most important governmental decisions, including the management of the whole foreign policy of the state and the initiation of legislation were determined by it. Questions of finance and religion, complaints against the public conduct of individuals, passing of new laws and amendment of existing ones were settled by it. (Dr. B. B. Majumdar.) यूनानी जनतंत्र ।

Democracy, Direct. (1) A direct democracy is one in which the will of the state is formulated and expressed directly through the people acting in their primary capacity.

Such a type of democracy is possible only where the area of the state is very small, where the people of the state can all meet and deliberate together to make laws.

(2) A direct democracy is one which is carried on by representatives chosen by the people to act for them by the people themselves directly in mass meeting or by use of the referendum. Under such a system the voters assemble at a convenient point, enact their laws, vote the necessary taxes, elect their officers and decide upon important questions of public policy without the help of a legislative body. Manifestly a Government of this kind is possible only in small and sparsely settled communities, where it is convenient for the voters to assemble at a common place and where the functions of government are few and simple. Survivals of this type of government are found today only in a few of the small and scarcely settled cantons of Switzerland. प्रत्यक्ष जनतंत्र ।

Equity. With the growth of society new cases of conflict began to arise. Rules that have been definitely established were not applicable in certain cases, and if they were applied strictly, they failed to satisfy the better sense of justice that had developed in the minds of the people. In such cases judgments had to be delivered according to common sense or fairness. Such judgements became known as 'equity'. Sir Henry Maine has defined equity as—'Any body of rules existing by the side of the original civil law, found on distinct principles and claiming incidently to supersede the Civil Law in virtue of a superior sanctity inherent in those principles. समभाव; तिष्पक्षता; अपक्षपाती न्याय ।

Equity and Law. Equity is a moral virtue, which qualifies, moderates and reforms the rigour, hardness and edge of the law and is an universal truth. It does also assist the law, where it is defective and weak in the constitution (which is the life of the law) and defends the law from crafty evasions, delusions and mere subtleties invented and contrived to evade and elude the common law, whereby such as have undoubted right are made remediless, and this is the office of equity to protect and support the common law from shifts and contrivances against the justice of the law. (Sir John Trevor). न्याय और विधी; निष्पक्षता और कानून ।

Exchange. Is, properly, the giving of one thing or commodity for another, and in commercial language is employed to denote the means by which the debts of persons residing at a distance from their creditors are discharged without the transmission of money. This is effected by means of what are known as bills of exchange. Exchanges between parts of United Kingdom are now almost entirely in the hands of bankers. In cities or countries having a considerable amount of intercourse together, the debts mutually due by the one to the other approach for the most part near to an equality. Between countries making use of different currencies there is what is known as a mint par of exchange, which is the equivalency of a certain amount of the currencies of one country in the currency of other, the currencies of both being supposed to be of the precise weight and purity fixed by their respective mints. Among the causes that affect the par of exchange, in addition to a rise or a fall in the price of the precious metals, are (1) Changes made by authority in the quantity, (2) Depreciation from the use of paper money, (3) Clipping, (4) Tear and wear.

When two countries trade together, and each buys of the other exactly to the amount that it sells, their claims will balance each other and the exchange will be at par. This, however, is rarely the case, for there is almost always a balance owing on the one side or the other, and this balance affects the rate of exchange. Thus, if London sends more goods to Hamburg than she receives from it, there will be a greater demand for bills upon London in Hamburg than of bills upon Hamburg in London, and their value will proportionally advance above par, while in London in like manner, they will fall below it. It is evident, however, that these fluctuations in their real exchange are subject to certain limits, beyond which they cannot advance. Thus the price of bills of exchange on any place above the mint par of exchange can never exceed the expenses of sending bullion to that place, otherwise the merchant will find it to his advantage to transmit bullion in place of bills. The tendency of any advance in the rate of exchange is to stimulate exportation. विनिमय, परिवर्तन ।

The law of England recognizes no other person or body as having authority to override or set aside the law made by Parliament. This exclusive right or power of law-making is not confined to the United Kingdom, it extends to every party of the British Empire, except the Crown Colonies. There are no other limits to its power of making laws than those which are imposed by itself. Unlike the legislatures of many other countries, it is bound by no fundamental charter or constitution, but has in itself the sole constitutional right of establishing and altering the laws and government of the Empire. This right or power is known as the Sovereignty of Parliament. विधि-निर्माण का एकान्त-अधिकार ।

The advantages of the method of popular election are, that it is more distinctly in accordance with modern notions of popular government, stimulates interest in public affairs, affords a means of political education for the masses, and secures a choice of the chief administrator in whose ability and integrity the people have confidence and to whom he is more or less directly responsible for his official conduct. निर्वाचित शासक-वर्ग ।

Executive Hereditary. Hereditary executives exist in the older countries of the world. According to this system, office goes according to the law of primogeniture.

In modern times most of the hereditary executives are not ordinarily the actual chiefs of the administration; but only the titular heads. Their office is mainly to lend dignity, majesty and ornament to the government as a cupola is intended to add grace and proportion to the building (Garner). पुरतैनी शासक ।

Executive nominal or titular. The nominal executive is that in whose name the government is administered, but who, in fact has little to do with the actual work of administration. Thus in countries like Great Britain, having the fully developed cabinet system of government, the real executive is the ministry, the crown being the executive only in a nominal sense. नाममात्र का शासक ।

Executive, Political and Departmental. The executive of a state has two aspects—the political and the departmental. On the one hand it is a small body of statesmen, who recommend a policy for the acceptance of the legislature and after its acceptance, are responsible for its application, on the other it is a much larger body of officials who carry out the determinations at which the statesmen have arrived. In their programme the founders declared that their aim was “The transformation of society by transferring the soil and industrial capital from the hands of private owners into the possession of the collectivity.”

Many well known modern writers like Annie Beasant, H. G. Wells, Ramsay Macdonald, Graham Wallas, Laski, G. D. Cole joined this society. Thus it became the ‘brains’ of socialism in England. Fascism. Italian nationalist movement founded by Mussolini in 1919. Its programme is ultra-nationalist, authoritarian, anti-communistic and anti-parliamentary. It propounded the political doctrine of unquestioned sovereignty of the state and the unity of the nation. It assumes that the interests of the state and those of the individual are synonymous. According to it democracy is inconsistent with the real progress of the people and the nation. No good government is possible in a democratic system because of the multitude of wills.

The masses, according to Fascist view, can hardly formulate any strong and determined policy of national welfare. Only the best and ablest are capable conducting the government of the state in the best interests of the people.

After the downfall of Mussoloni the whole structure of Fascism crumbled like the home of cards. फासिस्टवाद ।

The fascist state conscious, and has itself a will and a personality—thus it may be called the ethical state. The state, as conceived of and created by Fascism, is a spiritual and moral fact in itself. The Italian Nation is an organism with purposes, a life and a means of action transcending in power and duration those of individuals single or grouped, which compose it. It is moral and economic unity which realizes, itself in the Fascist State" (Mussoloni—The Political and Social Doctrine of Fascism) फासिस्ट राज्य ।

Federal Government. A federal government exists where in a political community, the powers of government are distributed between two classes of organization—a central government affecting the whole territory and population of sovereignty, and a number of local governments affecting particular areas and the persons and things therein—which are so far independent of each other that one can not destroy the other, or limit the power of the other, or encroach upon the sphere of the other as determined by the sovereign in the constitution (W. Harrison. 'The Constitution of the Commonwealth of Australia'). संघीय सरकार ।

Federal Judiciary. One of the essentials of a federal constitution is to decide disputes. Where there are two governments, Provincial and Central, each with stated powers, cases of conflict may arise. This not only makes a judicial body necessary but gives that body great power over both the legislatures and executive. Thus if either a state or central legislature passes a law which is not within its power according to the constitution, that law becomes void because the Courts will refuse to apply it in any given case. Such a law is Ultra vires or beyond the constitutional powers of the law-making body, and therefore is inapplicable.

Federal judicial organization is not the same in all federal governments. In the United States and the British federations the constitution provides for a federal judicial organ which is independent of the other branches of government and of the governments of the states. The courts preserve the constitutional balance between the states and the federation in respect to their constitutional powers. In Canada the Governor General has power to disallow a bill as Ultra Vires, but his decision does not affect the right of the Supreme Court to pronounce a law unconstitutional. In Switzerland the courts have not power to question the legality of federal legislation. The theory underlying this is that the legislature, as the supreme organ of the will of the people, decrease the limits of its own power. The power of the courts on the continent is also affected by the system of administrative law, under which the government decides for itself whether a law is constitutional or not, संघीय न्याय विभाग ।

Federal Land Banks. (U. S. A.) A Chain of Banks set up throughout the country by the government in 1916 in an effort to provide a banking system for farmers somewhat like the federal reserve system for banking interests. Where several states unite themselves under a common sovereignty and establish a common central government for the administration of certain affairs of general concern or where a number of provinces or dependencies are similarly united by their common superior, the component members still retaining a large measure of local autonomy, but surrendering the management of the whole or nearly the whole of their external affairs to the central Government, we have a federal union, or as is often said, a federal state (Garner). संघात्मक एकीकरण ।

Federal Union, Perfect. Some writers like Freeman, De Tocqueville, John Stuart Mill and Wheaton distinguish between perfect and imperfect Federal Unions. The former is one in which the Central Government is fully supreme in all external affairs and in certain specified internal affairs of general concern, which acts directly and immediately upon all individuals within the federation and which possesses the power and means of enforcing its own declared will. An imperfect Federal Union is one in which remnants of confederatism survive and which is organized more like a confederation than a unitary state. The component states possess a limited power in the management of foreign affairs, the acts of the central government are enforced by the individual state governments within the limits of the federal authority. सम्पूर्ण संघीय एकीकरण ।

As the time of French Revolution, when the dogma of universal suffrage was at its height of popularity, a petition was presented to the National Assembly asking for extension of the right of voting to women and it received the support of men like Condorcet and others. It was said that if voting was a natural right, it ought not to be denied to women. In more recent times it has been advocated by such great political thinkers like Jeremy Bentham, Thomas Hare, Professor Sidgwick, and J. S. Mill in England, by Laboulaye in France and by many men of note in America. One by one the democracies of the modern world have admitted women to the vote. स्त्री-मताधिकार; नारी-मताधिकार ।

The king was regarded as the holder of all the land, but much of this he let out to barons, who were his tenants-in-chief and who in return for the land, agreed to perform certain services, usually to provide him with a certain number of soldiers in time of war. सामन्तवाद ।

Imperial Federation. The idea of federalism from time to time led many political thinkers in Great Britain to consider the possibility of an Imperial federation in the British Empire on the lines of old German Imperial Federation. It has been felt that if the colonies, dependencies and dominions consulting the Empire could be brought into the framework of a federal constitution, the interests of the whole empire, through political and economical co-operation, might be furthered. साम्राज्य-संघ ।

Individualism. Individualism, as a political doctrine, has its origin in the latter part of the eighteenth century as a reaction against the evils of over government in Europe. It was one of the leading tenents of the physio-cratic school of economists that the state ought not to interfere with the economic activities of the people by prescribing conditions under which industry should be carried on, but should confine its functions to the simple protection of the laws of nature under which production would best regulate itself if left alone. They accordingly attacked the prevailing notions regarding the omnipotence of the state and demanded freedom of trade and industry. This doctrine received a powerful stimulus from the publications of Adam Smith's Wealth of Nations, (1776) which was a plea for the policy of non-interference by the state in economic matters. Some of the most famous political and economic writers supported this doctrine (Garner).

Judiciary, Independence of. It has been well observed by a noted jurist and commentator that 'in every well organized government-with reference to the security both of public rights and private rights-it is indispensable that there should be independant judiciary to ascertain and decide rights, to punish crimes, to administer justice, and to protect the innocent from injury and usurpation.' Where there is no independent judiciary to interpret and execute the law and to enforce rights, 'the government must either perish, says Chancellor Kent, 'by its own imbecility, or other departments of government must usurp powers for the purpose of commanding obedience to the destruction of liberty'.

A great deal has been written on the subject, which was clarified by John Austin in his 'Lectures on Jurisprudence.' Later writers include Sir H. Maine, Sir P. Vinogradoff, and Sir T. E. Holland in England, while much valuable work has been done by French, German and American writers such as Savigny and Story.

(2) The Philosophical aspect of the knowledge of law (Cicero). The knowledge of things human and divine, the science of the just and the unjust (Ulpian). Jurisprudence as a formal science was developed in England by Hobbes, Bentham and Austin. Sir Henery Maine fostered the study of the historical development of law and comparative law.

They dwell upon its character as a juristic person, a corporation of public law, the bearer of public rights and obligations. The juristic personification of the state has always been a favourite theme of a certain class of German and French writers. Some of them following the theories of the Roman Law, have attributed to it only a limited juristic personality, while others have emphasised its character as a real juristic person in the strictest sense of the word. Jury. (Lat. Jurare, to swear) A body of sworn men summoned to decide questions of fact in judicial proceeding. The jury in origin was "a body of neighbours summoned by some public officer to give upon oath, a true answer to some questions". The Jury is "the principal criterion of truth in the law of England". They originally testified to and decided issues of fact on their own knowledge. With the introduction of sworn witnesses the jury became exclusively the judge of fact. पञ्च; ज्यूरी ।

The sworn inquest was apparently introduced by the Normans into England from the procedure of the Carolingian Kings of France. The inhabitants of a district were summoned by a royal officer to testify and to declare or decide matters of fact relating to property and offences. In England in Anglo-Saxon times judgement was pronounced by the suitors to the communal Courts, who sat under the presidency of the sheriff or other officer.

Civil cases are tried ordinarily before a common jury of twelve, but cases may be tried before a special jury consisting of persons of superior status.

The mode of trial is normally fixed by the order on the summons for direction, or order giving leave to defend under order XIV. In the King's Bench Division neither party has a right to a jury except in cases of fraud, libel, slander, malicious prosecution, false imprisonment, seduction, or breach of promise of marriage, unless inconvenient, with or without a jury. In the Chancery Division trial is without a jury, unless the Court otherwise orders.

It shall be the duty of the Government of the United States to furnish each Government named in the preamble and every Government subsequently adhering to this Treaty with a certified copy of the Treaty and of every instrument of ratification or adherence. It shall also be the duty of the Government of the United States telegraphically to notify such Governments immediately upon the deposit with it of each instruments of ratification or adhering.

(2) "Liberty consists in the right to do whatever is not contrary to the rights of other" (Thomas Paine-The Rights of Men). Mill Defines the region of human liberty as follows:—

"It comprises first, the inward domain of consciousness, demanding liberty of consciousness in the most comprehensive sense, liberty of thought and feeling, absolute freedom of opinion and sentiment on all subjects practical or speculative, scientific, moral or theological. The liberty of expressing and publishing opinions may seem to fall under a different principle, since it belongs to that part of the conduct of an individual which concerns other people, but, being almost of as much importance as the liberty of thought itself, and resting in great part on the same reasons, it is practically inseparable from it. Secondly the principle requires liberty of tastes and pursuits, of framing the plan of our life to suit our own character, of doing what we like—subject to such consequences as may follow—without impediment from our fellow creatures so long as what we do does not harm them even though they should think our conduct foolish, perverse or wrong. Thirdly, from this liberty of each individual follows the liberty, within the same limits, of combination among individuals freedom to unite, for any purpose not involving harm to others. No society in which these liberties are not, on the whole, respected, is free, whatever may be the form of government" (Mill-Liberty). स्वाधीनता; स्वतन्त्रता; आज़ादी ।

Liberty, Absolute. Perfect freedom. पूर्ण स्वाधीनता; पूर्ण स्वतन्त्रता ।

Liberty, Civil. Freedom which a citizen of a free country has a right to enjoy.

The conception of civil liberty in any clear form arose first out of the French Revolution. The French gave to the world a concept of liberty and human rights:—'Men are born and live free and equal before law'. "The aim of all political association is the conservation of natural rights of men. These rights are liberty, property, security and resistance to oppression". 'Sovereignty resides in a nation. No group or individual dare exercise authority which does not emanate expressly from the nation'. "Law is an expression of general will". All citizens are equally admissible to public employment and dignities'. "No man may be accused, arrested or detained out of the scope of law and the prescribed forms", "The free communication of ideals and opinion is a very precious right of man." These are the few of the articles laid down by the French Constitution of 1789. "Secondly, it may mean the Rule of Law, that is, the limitation of the powers of government by established law, whether it be in the form of a constitution which contains fundamental principles to guide and limit the government, or, the fact that law applies equally and impartially to all, to the greatest and humblest alike. This sense of the term may be called Civil Liberty." (Gilchrist). नागरिक स्वतन्त्रता ।

Liberty of Speech. The right to state facts and express opinions.

Liberty of Speech and the Press. Judge Cooley in speaking of the liberty of speech and of the press says—"We understand liberty of speech and of the press is to imply not only liberty to publish, but complete immunity from legal censure and punishment for the publication, so long as it is not harmful in its character when tested by such standards as the law affords."

The Liberty of the press consists in the right to publish with impunity the truth, with good motives and for justifiable ends, whether it respects governments or individuals. भाषण और मुद्रण-स्वातन्त्र्य ।

It also means constitutional Government, that is, a form of government in which the people as a whole have an effective voice. It means that the people themselves determine how they are to be governed. राजनैतिक स्वातन्त्रता ।

Legislative Assembly (Indian Constitution.)

The Legislative Assembly of a State will be elected on the basis of adult suffrage. The total number of its members will not exceed 500 nor be less than 60, the actual strength being determined on the ratio of one to every 75,000 of the population. The exception is the autonomous districts of Assam and the constituency comprising cantonment and municipality of Shillong, where, in view of the small population, the proportion cannot be maintained. The population of a State is to be ascertained on the basis of the published figures of the last census.

The provision relating to the redistribution of the constituencies and the reallotment of the members is similar to that of parliament, except that here instead of Parliament the legislative Assembly must initiate the necessary legislation. धरासभा; व्यवस्थापिकासभा ।

Liberty, Individual. (Indian Constitution) consistent with the democratic professions, the new Constitution seeks to guarantee basic rights and freedom to all people in India. Every citizen enjoys freedom of speech and expression, the right to assemble peacefully and without arms, form associations or unions, move freely throughout the territory of India, reside and settle in any part of the territory of India, acquire, hold and dispose of property, and practise any profession or to carry on any occupation, trade or business.

These rights, however, can by no means be absolute nor are they so in practice. The Constitution enables the State to restrict these rights in the interest of public order, decency, morality, and security of State and authorizes it to impose any reasonable restrictions in the public interest. Personal liberty and the rule of law also find their due place in the Constitution. It is provided that no person shall be convicted of any offence, nor will he be subject to a penalty greater than what may have been included under the existing laws. The other legal reliefs which are made available to the individual are that no person shall be prosecuted and punished for the same offence twice over and that no person accused himself. The principle of the rule of law is recognized by other provisions, namely, that no person shall be deprived of his life or personal liberty except in accordance with the procedure established by law, and that no person shall be denied equality before the law or the equal protection of the laws in the country.

The section on "Rights of Equality" also guarantees the freedom of trade and commerce throughout the territory of India and prohibits traffic in human beings and enforced labour and the employment of children in factories, mines and other hazardous employments. वैयक्तिक स्वतन्त्रता ।

Local Government. In modern States' distinction is often drawn between a central government and a local government, but it is very difficult to define what local governments exactly mean. In the United States the local governments mean and include those organs of government, which are not completely subordinate to the central government but have been given independence in certain matters within prescribed limits. The distinction between the two is based neither upon the extent of territory nor upon the number of population. It is based upon the kind of work done.

If we study the various functions of government we will find that there are certain functions which are of general interest and for this reason they can be easily and efficiently managed by the central government having authority over the whole state. The functions include matters of war and peace, tariffs, contracts, marriage and divorce. There are many other functions such as water-supply and lighting which have to be performed with reference to the needs of particular areas and can be managed efficiently by a body of persons having local experience. For the performance of these functions, local bodies are constituted and they are generally given freedom of action in these matters. Again, there are several other functions, e. g., education and sanitation which require some amount of central although the practical details may be left to the local bodies for management.

Local Governments, (Chinese). These are provincial Governments, special Municipalities enjoying extraordinary powers, Common Municipal Councils, and the district Governments. In a Lock-out the employer takes the initiative in concluding the contract of employment, in a strike the workers take the initiative. तालाबंदी ।

Local Self Government. The principle of local self government is regarded as fundamental in all democratic political institutions. It means that local affairs shall be decided upon and regulated by local authorities, and that the citizens of particular districts have the right to determine upon their own public concerns and select their own local officials without being controlled by any outside agency. For this purpose municipal corporations are established, and are invested with powers of government subordinate to the general authority of the state, but exclusive within their sphere.

The institution of local self-government is regarded as the most valuable safe-guard against tyranny and oppression. The underlying idea of this institution is this that the Government of the country should be entrusted with powers as concern the welfare of the whole country, while the individual units are given full freedom in regulating their internal affairs. स्थानीय स्वराज्य; स्थानीय स्वशासन ।

Starting from this point of view, we find the final causes of all social changes and of all political revolutions in the constant alterations of the modes of production and exchange, and not in the human brain or in the human comprehension of external truth and justice. They are usually eighteen or twenty in number. In a large sense the ministry embraces all political functionaries charges with the direction of public affairs and who hold their positions only during the existence of the cabinet. Ministers Council of (Indian Constitution).

The Constitution provides that there shall be a Council of Ministers, with the Prime Minister at the head, to aid and advise the President in the exercise of his functions. The leadership of the Prime Minister is explicitly recognized. It is laid down that while the Prime Minister shall be appointed by the President, the other ministers shall be appointed by the President on the advice of the Prime Minister. It is the Prime Minister who is the link between the Cabinet and the President. It is for him to communicate to the President all decisions of the Cabinet relating to the administration and legislative affairs of the Union and to furnish to him all other information that would be sought by him. The President is, however, authorized to submit for consideration of the Council of Ministers any matter on which a decision has been taken by a minister and which still awaits consideration by the Council.

The ministers hold office during the pleasure of the President, but this provision is coupled with another which stipulates their collective responsibility to the House of the People. This means that 'a Minister would be liable to removal on two grounds, namely want of confidence and impurity of administration'. The ministers are required to take the oaths of office and secrecy and their salaries will be determined by Parliament. मन्त्री-परिषद् ।

Ministers Responsibility (In British Constitutions). Every Minister, whether or not in the Cabinet, is in theory, individually responsible to Parliament, i. e. to the House of Commons for all his public acts, and he has to resign if he is made the object of a vote of censure. In practice, responsibility of the Cabinet is collective and not individual. If an individual Minister falls into disfavour he is either persuaded by his colleagues to modify his course, or to resign before an adverse Parliamentary vote is passed. If not, the Cabinet as a whole rallies to his support and stands or falls with him. There are four ways in which a Parliamentary majority manifests its dissatisfaction with a Cabinet and thereby compels its resignation:— (1) by a simple vote of "want of confidence" assigning no definite reason for it, (2) by a vote of censure for some specific act, (3) by defeating the measures which the Cabinet advocates and declares to be of vital importance, and (4) by passing a bill in opposition to the advice of the ministers. When any of these four votes is carried in the Commons the Cabinet can do one of two things: if it is clear that the cabinet has lost the support not only of parliament but also of the electorate, the Ministry has to resign, (2) if there is doubt as to whether the Parliamentary majority really represents the country upon the matter at issue, the Prime Minister will be warranted in requesting the King to dissolve Parliament and to order a general election. In the latter case, the Ministry continues in office until the general election is over. If the elections return a majority prepared to support the Ministers, they get a new lease of life. If, on the contrary, the majority is hostile, the Ministry must retire. मन्त्रिमण्डल का उत्तरदायित्व ।

Rome was cited by both Cicero and Polibious as an example of the mixed type, being composed of monarchic, aristocratic, and democratic elements, and Cicero considered the best state to be the mixed form. Nation. The word 'Nation' comes from the root natus—the latin word—which means born. Modern English usage however has given distinct meanings to this word. We give the modern definitions of this word in the light of prominent authorities on political science.

A nation is a portion of society definitely separated from the rest of the world by natural geographical boundaries, the inhabitants of which have a common racial origin, speak the same language, have a common civilization, common customs and traditions (Garner).

Burgess defines a nation as a "population having a common language and literature, a common tradition and history, common customs and a common consciousness of rights and wrongs, inhabiting a territory of a geographic unity." (Political Science and Constitutional Law Vol. I.).

The French publicist, Pradier. Fodere defines a nation as "the union of a society of inhabitants speaking the same language, governed by the same laws, connected by identity of origin, physical characteristics, and moral dispositions, by community of interests and sentiments and by a fusion of existences acquired by the lapse of centuries."

A nation, says Bluntschli is a 'union of masses of men of different occupations and social strata in a hereditary society of common spirit, feeling and race, bound together especially by language and customs, in a common civilization, which gives them a sense of unity and distinction from all foreigners quite apart from the bond,'

According to Lord Bryce 'A nation is a nationality which has organised itself into a political body either independent or desiring to be independent.'

Dr. Biman Behari Majumdar in his 'Principles of Political Science and Government' defines nation as a people possessed of a political consciousness and life which may find expression in the organization of state'.

"Nationality is not a political creed for oppressed peoples. It is more than creed or a doctrine or a code of conduct. It is an instinctive attachment" (Nationality and Government).

B. Joseph gives the following definition of nationality: "A natural corporate sentiment which manifests itself in the members of a group in certain preferences and sympathies for things connected with the group."

XXX "Nationality, as a quality, is the subjective corporate sentiment permanently present in and giving a sense of distinctive unity to the majority of the members of a particular civilized section of humanity, which, at the same time, objectively constitutes a distinct group by virtue of possessing certain collective attributes peculiar to it such as homeland, language, religion, history, culture and tradition."

R. N. Gilchrist in his "Principles of Political science" defines nationality as:-

"Nationality is a spiritual sentiment or principle arising among a number of people usually of the same race, resident on the same territory, sharing a common language, the same religion, similar history and traditions, common interests, common political associations, and common ideals of political unity. Territory, race, language, history and traditions, religion, common interests, common political associations, and common hopes of political unity are the elements on which nationality is based. They are the basis of nationality, not nationality itself, which is a spiritual principle supervening when some or all of these elements are present. Not all of these elements taken together, nor any one of them, nor any combination of them, will make nationality. Not one of the elements is absolutely essential; nor are all of them taken together essential. But every nationality has as basis some of them. Nationality is spiritual. The physical element must be accompanied by the spiritual; otherwise, there is a body but no soul. राष्ट्रीयता ।

It is the act by a nation of adopting a foreigner and admitting him to take part in its polity. The naturalization of aliens is a subject which is regulated by the municipal law of such individual state. Naturalisations en masse take place when territory is annexed by, or ceded to another state. The status of inhabitants is usually the subject of special clauses in the treaty determining the conditions of the annexation or cession. It is generally considered at the present day, that the inhabitants should have a right of option enabling them to retain their existing nationality. (See Ency. of the Laws of England, Phillimore International Law, Dicey, Conflict of Laws, Wheaton, International Law).

Garner defines naturalization as:—
“In its broadest sense naturalization signifies the act of formally adopting a foreigner into the political body of the nation and of clothing him with the privileges of a native.”

XXX “Naturalization in the wider sense includes the bestowal of citizenship on an alien, whether through legitimation, adoption, the naturalization of the children through the naturalization of the parent, the naturalization of a woman through marriage to a citizen, naturali-

“In a more restricted sense naturalization has reference to the granting of citizenship by a court or an administrative officer after the fulfillment by the applicant of certain prescribed conditions. An important achievement of the Soviet Medical Service is the so-called night sanatoria which are intended to deal with the early stages of disease when the patient has not reached the point when he must give up his work and go to a hospital or sanatorium, but is not sufficiently well to continue the ordinary mode of life. The patient, after work, goes to the night sanatorium, changes his clothing for sanatorium garments, washes himself, receives proper food, sleeps under hygienic conditions (in the open air or with open doors), and is given what medical aid he may require. The Institute of International Law in 1887 adopted the following rules regarding Pacific Blockade:—"Ships under a foreign flag may enter despite the blockade. Such a Committee has been known in India from the most ancient times as the Panchayat. The most powerful weapon in the heads of the Panchayat for enforcing their orders and behests has always been the power of excommunication, which means exclusion from all benefits which a member of the caste is entitled to and ostracism from all social functions and religious rites. Parliament, (Indian Constitution.) In the Indian Constitution the Central Legislature is called Parliament. All bills passed by the two Houses must have his formal assent and all Acts are enforced and promulgated by him. भारतीय पार्लियामेंट; भारतीय संसद ।

Parliament. Parliament comes from the French Word 'Parlement' which means originally a meeting for discussion.

Parliament is the legislative branch of the supreme power of Great Britain; consisting of the King, the Lords Spiritual, Temporal and the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, representatives of the Commons of the realm (Tomlin's Law Dict).

In Great Britain the Parliament is both the ordinary legislative body and the constituent assembly. It is legally omnipotent and subject to no restraints except those of a moral and physical character. There is no person or body of persons in Great Britain capable of making rules which can override or derogate from an act of Parliament.

The British Parliament which originated in the thirteenth century, became definitely organised into two Houses in the fourteenth century, wrested a control of the nation's affairs from the King in the seventeenth century, underwent a thorough going democratisation in the nineteenth and the twentieth centuries, is the oldest and the most powerful of modern legislative bodies. It is rightly called the "Mother of Parliaments". The Jurisdiction, which it exercises, includes the whole domain of government, its power, both in law and in fact, is absolute and unrestricted. It is composed of the Crown and the three estates of the realm, as they are sometimes called, viz. the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons. Each of these component parts has its distinct rights and privileges and plays an important role in the government of the country.

Parliamentary Government. The Indian Constitution provides for a parliamentary form of government. Accordingly, the executive is individually and collectively responsible to the legislature in respect of all its functions and decisions and actions. The legislature controls the executive through legislation, questions, no-confidence motions as well as by controlling the purse. At general elections the common people are given an opportunity to give their verdict and elect a new parliament.

This system of Government differs vitally from that of the United States of America where the President is the real executive and the Cabinet is only his shadow. Under the Indian Constitution, however, the President occupies the same position as the king under the English Constitution. He is the head of the state but not of the executive. He represents the nation but does not rule the nation. His place in the administration is that of a ceremonial device on a seal by which the nation's decisions are made known.

The Constitution vests all executive authority of the Union including the Supreme Command of the Defence Forces of India and the power to grant pardon and to remit punishment or to commute the sentence of any convict in the President and provides that it shall be exercised by him in accordance "with the Constitution and the Law".

All executive actions of the Government shall be executed in the name of the President. But this does not mean that the President will exercise his authority in an arbitrary manner. He will be only a titular head. The real head of the executive will be the Prime Minister and the executive functionary will be the Cabinet i. e. the Council of Ministers. The Indian Constitution ensures the leadership and dominance of the Cabinet and leaves it to Parliament, the courts and the people to keep a check on its actions. पार्लियामेन्टरी शासन; संसदीय शासन ।

The power of Parliament extends to very part of the King's colonies and dependencies. पार्लियामेन्टरी प्रभुता; संसदीय प्रभुता ।

Patrimonial, State. A patrimonial state is one in which not only the political sovereignty but also the ownership of the land embraced within the territorial limits of the state is attributed to the ruler. That is, the king not only exercises sovereignty over the land, but dominion also, he is not only ruler but proprietor also. The idea of such a relation is frequently referred to in the literature of antiquity. It occupied an important place in early Germanic Law and in a sense was the basis of the feudal system. The patrimonial state was recognised by the early writers on international law like Grotius, Pufendorf, Wolf and others (Jellinek).

People's Commissariat of Health. The principal health department in Soviet Russia, which directs the entire health service in the country, according to plan. In June 1918 the People's Commissariat of Health was created. It was the first independent health department in history. The young Commissariat immediately found itself confronted with extremely difficult and responsible problems. The situation was unquestionable grave. During the years of civil war in Russia, the country was in the throes of epidemics, typhus was almost everywhere, cholera appeared in many places, and, in a few plague. The epidemic of typhus was particularly widespread, no accurate statistics were possible in those years. Some ten millions of people had typhus. The white Armies in the east and south, retreating under the pressure of the Red Army, left in the larger cities whole warehouses filled with one unburied corpses of people who had died from typhus. The difficulties of the commissariat were further aggravated by the fact that many of the doctors, particularly in the towns, the most highly qualified remained hostile to the Soviets during the early years of the November Revolution.

Nevertheless, it was precisely during these difficult years that the advantages of the Soviet system of health-protection and of the organization of a single commissariat of Health became apparent. The medical system was gradually brought into order, an economical and national distribution of the supply of medicines was achieved. Measures were immediately taken for the production in the U. S. S. R. of a number of medicines. Leaflets and pamphlets of a sanitary educational character flooded the country. At the 7th Congress of Soviets, held in 1919 Lenin summed up the situation in the pithy phrase, "Either socialism will defeat the louse, or the louse will defeat socialism".

The entire population was aroused for the struggle against typhus. In the factories and in the dwellings, worker's committees were organised to enforce cleanliness, the women taking a particularly active part in them, the network of bath-houses, laundries, disinfection chambers and hospitals for infectious patients grew apace. आरोग्य-कमिसरी ।

People. Government by the. The Draft Constitution envisages a democratic government and defines India as a sovereign democratic republic. In other words, India will have a system of government in which the average citizen has direct access to the sources of authority. The right to political power thus means not only the right to vote or choose representatives but also the right to hold and be chosen for any office. For the first time in the modern history of India, the Constitution confers that right on all adult persons, that is people who have attained the age of 21, and removes all discriminations based on birth, wealth, colour, race or sex. By a single stroke of the pen the Constitution transforms, for instance, the status of the Indian ryots who form seventy per cent of the population. They become genuine political masters of India. By parliamentary government and universal adult franchise, the Government becomes accountable to the people and to the representatives. The head of the State has only nominal functions and acts on the advice of his ministers. लोक-शासन ।

Personal Unions. Where two or more states, wholly separate and distinct in their external and internal relations, are associated together under the same reigning sovereign, we have, what is called, a personal union. The only bond of connection is the crown. Each of the associated states is entirely independent of the other; each has its own constitution and laws, its own citizenship and local institutions. The acts of their common sovereign in relation to each of the member states have no application within the territories of the other nor any binding effect upon its citizens. Indeed the subjects or citizens of the one are foreigners to the other. Though physically the same person, the sovereign possesses two distinct legal personalities and may enjoy widely different powers and attributes in the different states composing the union. He may be an absolute ruler in one and a constitutional ruler in the other (Garner). वैयक्तिक संच ।

Plural Executive. The system of government in which political and administrative power is conferred upon more than one person.

History furnishes some examples of the plural form of executive. In ancient Athens the executive power was split up into fragments and divided between generals, archons, etc., each being independent of the other. The Roman constitution for a long time provided for two consuls, each of whom was invested, not with a part of the executive power, but the whole of it and each could in effect veto the action of his colleagues. France after the Revolution experimented with the plural form of executive under several different constitutions.

At the present time, the executive, in every state, with one exception, is organised on the single headed principle. The exception, is found in the constitution of the Swiss republic, which vest the executive power in a council of seven persons. One of the seven bears the title and dignity of President of Confederation and performs the ceremonial duties of the executive office, but, in reality, he is merely a chairman of the council and shares the executive power equally with his colleagues. He is in no sense the supreme head of the administration and carries no greater responsibility than his fellow councilors (Garner).

Plural Voting. It has been contended by many that universal suffrage without taking into consideration the differences of wealth, age and education does not conduce to the development of a representative public opinion. They say that those who are more capable and efficient should be allowed to exercise a wider discretion than the ordinary electors. To this end in some countries the system of plural voting obtains. Under this system the same men possessing properties in different constituencies may vote in all these constituencies. Again some electors may exercise their votes several times as owners of properties, payers of income tax and as graduates of universities. But with the progress of education and democratic ideas in all countries this system is gradually dying out. In India, the system of plural voting has been abolished though graduates of the University and the electors of the land-holders constituency have been allowed to exercise a special second vote by the Act of 1935. Political power means capacity to regulate national life through national representatives. If national life becomes so perfect as to become self-regulated, no representation becomes necessary. There is then a state of enlightened anarchy. In such a state everyone is his own ruler. He rules himself in such a manner that he is never a hinderance to his neighbour. In the ideal state, therefore, there is no political power because there is no state. But the ideal never fully realized in life. Hence the classical statement of Thoreau that, that government is best which governs the least." (Gandhiji) राजनैतिक आदर्श ।

Political Liberty. Political liberty, in its modern meaning, is practically synonymous with democracy in which every citizen has a direct or indirect share in the management of the government of his country (See "Principles of Political Science by Gilchrist). राजनैतिक स्वतन्त्रता ।

Political Party. (See Party, Political). राजनैतिकदल ।

Political Philosophy. Political philosophy is said to be concerned with the theoretical or speculative consideration of the fundamental principles and essential characteristics of the materials and phenomena with which political science has to deal. It investigates the development of political thought, and enquire into the foundation of political authority. It analyses, classifies and forms judgments upon the essential attributes of the state. It is concerned rather with generalisations than with particulars, and predicates essential qualities. Again it is said that while political science furnishes us with the results of logical thinking upon the nature and forms of concrete political institutions, political philosophy inquires into the foundations of the first principles which underlie them (Garner). Political philosophy deals with the fundamental problems of the nature of the state, citizenship, questions of duty and right and political ideals (Gilchrist). राजनैतिकदर्शन ।

Political Obligations As there are civil and political rights so there are Civil & Political obligations. But nowhere are obligations more serious than in regard to political rights. Government is a difficult art and wrong moves may have grave consequences. So it is the duty of every person to shake off all prejudices and partiality to try to obtain correct information and to mind the good of all.

He is to treat the suffrage as a sacred trust and decline to be moved by any considerations, private or sectional except the public good, in casting the vote. If elected, he is morally bound, along with others assiduously to think out measures of public good and do his level best for their execution. Those placed in office should, so to say, live for the public, directing all their thoughts and actions to the social good. Political obligations are not merely of an intellectual character. They are also obligations of honesty and what is called public spirit or social service. The great thing is to steer clear of considerations of family, class, caste or sect and aims directly at the good of all". राजनैतिक इतिकर्तव्यता ।

Political Sovereignty. That body is politically sovereign or supreme in a state the will of which is ultimately obeyed by the citizens of the state. In this sense of the word the electors of Great Britain may be said to be, together with the crown and the lords, or perhaps, in strict accuracy, independently of the King and the Peers, the body in which sovereign power is vested. The Objectives Resolution unequivocally lays down that the ultimate sovereignty, both in the Union and the units, shall rest with the people and the principle has been incorporated in the preamble of the Draft Constitution, "We the people of India, it reads, having solemnly resolved to constitute India into a Sovereign Democratic Republic do hereby adopt, enact and give to ourselves this constitution." लोकप्रिय प्रभुत्व; लोकप्रियशासक।

Popular Sovereignty. The phrase "Popular Sovereignty" roughly means the power of the masses as contrasted with the power of an individual ruler or of the classes. It implies manhood suffrage with each individual having only one vote and the control of the legislature by the representatives of the people. जनप्रभुत्व।

Popular Sovereignty, Theory of:—This theory goes to locate the sovereign power in the people composing the State. It owes its origin to the forceful writings of anti-monarchical writers of the modern age. Rousseau in his monumental work, 'the social contract' expounded the theory with all vehemence he could command and went so far as to reduce the government to the position of a servant executing the sovereign will of the people, the general will.

In modern times the best exposition of the theory is to be found in the writings of prof. Ritchie. According to him people constitute the sole repository of sovereign power and do actually exercise such power directly by exercising their franchise and indirectly by influencing legislation, and by threat of rebellion they can at any time annihilate the existing government and establish another of their own choice. लोकप्रिय शासन के सिद्धान्त।

President Election of. The President will be indirectly elected by electoral college consisting of the elected members of both Houses of Parliament and the Legislatures of the States. The election will be by the method of proportional representation by means of a single transferable vote. The President being a nominal head, direct election was considered unnecessary. Moreover, it is difficult to provide a suitable electoral machinery for all the adult voters, that is for about 188 million people.

In the presidential election, the number of votes, each elected member of the legislature of a particular State can cast, will be ascertained by a method which will be clear from the following example given in the Constitution:

"The population of Bombay is 20,849,840. Let us take the total number of elected members in the Legislative Assembly of Bombay to be 208 (i. e. one member representing one lakh of the population). To obtain the number of votes, which each such elected member will be entitled to cast at the election of the President, we have first to divide 20,849,840 (which is the population) by 208 (which is the total number of elected members) and then to divide the quotient by 1000. In this case, the quotient is 100,239. The number of votes which each such member will be entitled to cast would be $100,239/1000$, i. e. 100 (disregarding the remainder 239 which is less than five hundred)".

In the case of an elected member of either House of Parliament i. e. the Central Legislature, he can cast such number of votes as may be obtained by dividing the total number of votes to be cast by all the elected members of the legislatures of the States by the total number of the elected members of both the Houses of Parliament. अधिकांश का निर्वाचन ।

Private and Public Moral Law. It is suggested that if Acts of Parliament are opposed to the principles of morality i.e. private moral law or to the doctrines of International law, i.e. public moral law, they are invalid. By this it is meant that parliament cannot make any law opposed to private or public morality. This assertion is to be taken in a very restricted sense. In theory, there is no such limitation on the power of Parliament. Even if Parliament passed an Act opposed to morality, it will still be law. The advocates of morality go even so far as to assert that the Courts will refuse to enforce such laws. In reality, this only means that judges will give such meaning and interpretation to the Statute as may be consistent with the doctrines of private or international morality. In doing so, they will presume that Parliament did not intend to violate those doctrines. But under no circumstances can this doctrine repeal or override the law enacted by Parliament. निजी और सार्वजनिक नैतिक नियम।

Thirty years ago it was almost unknown to Englishmen, even though they were interested in political theories. Twenty-years ago it was quite unknown to British electors. The word has now obtained popular currency but is often misunderstood."

"The Referendum is used by me as meaning the principle that Bills even when passed both by the House of Commons and by the House of Lords, should not become Acts of Parliament until they have been submitted to the vote of the electors and have received the sanction or approval of the majority of electors voting on the matter. The referendum is sometimes described as 'the people's veto.' Besides, it tends to safeguard freedom of every minority to practice its own religion, and to preserve its own culture, language and script. The term minority is used in a much wider sense than what it means technically so as to include even cultural minorities which exist in a particular locality. The main idea in ensuring cultural and educational rights, as Dr. Ambedkar explained, is to see that "If there was a cultural minority which wanted to preserve its own language and culture, the State would not by law impose upon it any other culture which might be local or otherwise." All minorities, religious or linguistic, have been given the right to establish and administer educational institutions and the State is prohibited from discriminating against any such institution in matters of granting aid. Further, no citizen is denied admission to the educational institutions maintained or aided by the State on grounds only of religion, race, caste, language or any of them. Rights of Association. "The right of Association" says Prof. Gilchrist, "is one of the elemental rights of man as a social being." In modern states the right of Association is widely recognised. सभा या सम्मेलन का अधिकार ।

Rights of Equality (Indian Constitution).

The new Constitution postulates civic and social equality as the bedrock of Indian policy. Discrimination against any citizen on grounds of religion, race, caste, sex or place of birth is prohibited. In public employment the constitution assures equality of opportunity for all. The only exception is the right given to the legislature to prescribe in certain cases residential qualifications and to reserve some posts for backward classes, who in the opinion of the State are not adequately represented in the service.

The definition of the "backward class" has been left to the decision of the local bodies.

Another important step which the Constitution has taken towards the establishment of social equality in India is the abolition of titles, local or foreign which created odious, artificial barriers in the past. Only military or academic distinction will now be permitted. समानता का अधिकार ।

Right of Free Speech. A citizen is entitled, according to the modern political conception, to enjoy perfect freedom of speech, provided it is not blasphemous, obscene or defamatory.

The modern use of the phrases "freedom of thought and freedom of speech" comes from the times of French Revolution. Originally the idea came from England. In the Declaration of the Rights of Man it is laid down that the "free communication of thoughts and opinions is one of the most precious rights of man. Each citizen therefore should be able to speak, write and print freely, subject to the responsibility for breaking this liberty in cases determined by the Law. The constitution guarantees as a natural and civil right to each man to speak, write and print and publish his thoughts without these writings being submitted to any censorship before publication.

Right of Resistance. The theoretical right, advocated by some political philosophers and denied by others, to resist and throw off the rule of a king if he should be unjust. Underlying this was the idea that the king derived his power from the people. प्रतिरोध का अधिकार ।

Right of Self-preservation. In International Law the right of self-preservation involves the right to require the military service of all its people, to levy troops and maintain a naval force, (and sufficient aerial forces), to build fortifications and to impose and collect taxes for all these purposes (Wheaton-International Law Vol. I.) आत्मरक्षा का अधिकार ।

Right of Worship and Conscience. A person has a right to worship God, in whatever way he pleases so long as he does not disturb public peace. Again every citizen must have liberty of thought and conscience, पूजा और विवेक-स्वातंत्र्य का अधिकार ।

Rights, Political. Political rights are those, through the exercise of which, a citizen participates in the conduct of Government. राजनैतिक अधिकार ।

Right to be Free. According to modern political conception every citizen, in order to realize his supreme end, is fully entitled, to enjoy the precious right to be free within the law of his nation.

In England the right to be free is safeguarded in two ways (1) by redress for arrest, and (2) by the Habeas Corpus Act. By the former a man wrongly arrested can claim damages or get the wrong doer punished, the latter is an order issued by the Courts to produce a prisoner or his body kept in restraint in order that his case may be dealt with by the Court. स्वतन्त्र होने का अधिकार ।

Right to Constitutional Remedies: (Indian Constitution). The provision relating to the constitutional remedies was described by Dr. Ambedkar as the "heart and soul of the whole Constitution." Rights are meaningless unless there are constitutional methods to enforce and safeguard them. The constitution guarantees the right to every citizen to move the Supreme Court for the enforcement of all the fundamental rights. And for that purpose the Supreme Court is given general powers to safeguard these rights as well as the power to propose particular remedies, such as habeas corpus, mandamus, etc.

The inclusion of these writs in the Constitution is a guarantee of the freedom of the individual. At present they are at the mercy of the legislature and can be scrapped at will. But after the Constitution comes into force they will become a part of the fundamental law and will not be changeable unless the Constitution is amended. Under this provision Parliament is also authorised to confer these powers on any other court to exercise them within the local limits of its jurisdiction. The right to constitutional remedies cannot be suspended, save in case of emergency declared by the President. Parliament is, however, authorized to modify the fundamental rights in their application to the armed forces and is directed to pass legislation to give effect to these rights and provide punishment for acts declared to be offences under it. Laws and punishment in force at present with regard to these matters will continue to be in force until altered or repealed by Parliament. The power to make those laws and prescribe punishment for offences is, for the time being, vested only in Parliament and not in the Legislature of any state. This provision, Dr. Ambedkar explained, is necessary to make the fundamental rights and the punishment for their breach uniform throughout India. वैधानिक उपायों का अधिकार; वैधानिक प्रतिकार का अधिकार ।

Right to Laziness. It is one of the demands of many socialists, who maintain the fact that man does not live solely for the purpose of work. The healthy normal man has a striving for activity, but he has also a right to leisure. Man is not only a wage-earner, but also a man, and has a right to moments of leisure. विराम का अधिकार ।

Right to Personal Liberty. The right to personal liberty means in substance a person's right not to be subjected to imprisonment, arrest, or physical coercion in any manner that does not admit of legal justification. That anybody should suffer physical restraint is in England Prima facie illegal, and can be justified (speaking in very general terms) on two grounds only, that is to say, either because the prisoner or person suffering restraint is accused of some offence and must be brought before the courts to stand his trial, or because he has been duly convicted of some offence and must suffer punishment for it. Now personal freedom in this sense of the term is secured in England by the strict maintenance of the principle that no man can be arrested or imprisoned except in due course of Law, i. e. under some legal warrant or authority, and what is of far more consequence, it is secured by the provision of adequate legal means for the enforcement of this principle. These methods are to fold, namely, redress for unlawful arrest or imprisonment by means of a prosecution or an action, and deliverance from unlawful imprisonment by means of the writ of habeas corpus (Dicey-Law of Constitution). वैयक्तिक स्वातंत्र्य का अधिकार ।

Right to Property. It consists in the free use, enjoyment and disposition of a person's acquisitions without any control save only by the law of the land. सम्पत्ति का अधिकार ।

Roman Democracy. After the fall of monarchy in Rome, the Governmental power fell into the hands of patricians. Then a long struggle ensued, which ended in the establishment of equal rights for the lebs, called Tribunals. In this republican constitution there were three elements of government which were supposed to balance and check one another. First the monarchical element manifested itself in the office of the two consuls, who were elected annually. Secondly the aristocratic element was embodied in the senate, an assembly with great legislative powers. Thirdly, the democratic element existed in the meetings of the people in three sorts of convention according to division of land or people. Rule of Law. It implies an idea of the supremacy of the law. All executive actions should be according to law. No one is to be arrested or imprisoned illegally. It does not countenance the idea of special treatment for any person on body. No one is above law.

(2) The rule of law remains to this day a distinctive characteristic of the English constitution. In England no man can be made to suffer punishment or to pay damages for any conduct, not definitely forbidden by law, every man's legal rights or liabilities are almost invariably determined by the ordinary courts of the realm, and each man's individual rights are far less the result of our constitution than the basis on which that constitution is founded (Dicey-Law of the Constitution). कानून का शासन ।

The next stage, maintain the socialists, will be a regime under which the working men will be possessors of the means of production and will consequently receive the entire product of their labour (Cf. Scientific Socialism. The term is applied to the socialism taught by Marx and his school, as distinguished from the Utopian Christian and Integral Socialism. It is called Scientific because it is not supposed to be a preconceived system, but to be based upon a critical analysis of social evolution and upon a materialistic interpretation of history (Dr. Angels S. Rappoport Dictionary of Socialism.) वैज्ञानिक समाजवाद ।

Scheduled Classes. A new and less harsh term for untouchables. परिगणित जातियां; हरिजन ।

In the present war also the Russians have succesfully scorched towns and villages before they have been occupied by the Germans. This policy has commonly been resorted to in many other theaters of the present world war. घर फूंक नीति ।

Not more than six of them and not more than six of their under Secretaries may sit in the House of Commons at the same time. Each Secretary of State can do anything which any one of the others is empowered to do. राज्य-सचिव ।

Secretary of State. (In U. S. A.) According to Bryce the most dignified place in the Cabinet is that of the Secretary of State. In early days it was regarded as the stepping stone to the presidency in the United States of America. Jafferson, Madison, Monroe and J. K. Adams had all served as Secretaries preceding presidents. The conduct of foreign affairs, the chief duty of the state department, its head has therefore a large stage to play on than any other minister, and more chances of fame. His Personal importance is all the greater because the President is usually so much absorbed by questions of patronage as to be forced to leave the secretary to his own devices. Hence the foreign policy of the administration is practically that of the secretary, except so far as the latter is controlled by the senate. The state department has also the charge of the great seal of the United States, keeps the archives, publishes the statutes, and of course instructs and controls the diplomatic and consular services. It is often said of the President that he is ruled or as the Americans express it "run" by his secretary. अमेरिका का राज्यसचिव ।

Sectarianism. Sectarianism included adherence to a distinct political party. दलवाद; साम्प्रदायिकता ।

Secular State. In spite of the existence of various communities in India, the Draft Constitution is opposed to communal polity and contemplates a secular State for India. Equality of citizenship will be assured to all irrespective of religion, caste, colour or sex. The services provided by the State will thus be distributed equally among all its citizens. Every citizen of India will be free to practise the religion of his choice. The Government will scrupulously refrain from propagating discrimination on religious grounds or from patronizing or practising any faith. The ideal is based on the theory that a secular State deals only with the relations between man and man and not between man and God. The State will regulate the individual's behaviour only in relation to other human beings.

A minor deviation from the principle of equality is contemplated in the Draft Constitution in the case of certain special backward classes. For the next ten years, seats will thus be reserved in the legislatures for the Scheduled Castes, including Mazhabis. Ramdasis. Kabir-panthis and Sikh-Ligris. लौकिक राज्य ।

Security Council. The organ of the United Nations which has been given the "primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security." In discharging this responsibility it has the power to settle international disputes and to enforce its decisions by force,

This right of private redress extends not only to the defence of a husband or wife, a parent or child, or even, as has been said, a master or servant but it also extends to the defence by a man of his goods (See B. L. Com. 121, Blades V. Higgs). आत्म-रक्षा ।

The right of self-defence for the nation involves 'the right to acquire the military service of all its people, to levy troops and maintain a naval force, to build fortifications and to impose and collect taxes for all these purposes' (Wheaton-International Law). आत्म-संरक्षण ।

Senate. The Federal Legislature of the United States composed of the senate and the House of Representatives.

The Senate consists of two persons from each state, who must be inhabitants of that state, and at least thirty years of age. They used to be elected by the legislature of their state before 1913, but as the result of the amendment they are now elected for six years by popular vote. One third retire every two years so that the whole body is renewed in a period of six years.

The most conspicuous, and what was at one time deemed the most important feature of the senate, is that it represents the several states of the Union as separate Commonwealths, and is thus an essential part of the Federal Scheme. Every state, be it as great as New York or as small as Delaware, sends two senators, no more and no less.

The functions of the senate fell into three classes—Legislative, executive and judicial. Its legislative function is to pass, along with the House of Representatives, bills which become Acts of Congress on the assent of the president, or even without the consent if passed a second time by a two-thirds majority of each House, after he has returned them for reconsideration. Its executive functions are:—(a) To approve or disapprove the President's nomination of Federal officers, including judges, ministers of states, and ambassadors. (b) To approve, by a majority of two thirds of those present, of treaties made by the President—i. e. if less than two thirds approve the treaty falls to the ground. Its judicial functions are to sit as a court for the trial of impeachments preferred by the house of Representatives. (Bryce-American Commonwealth). सीनेट; अमेरिका की लोक प्रतिनिधिसभा ।

This institution concentrates the entire system of sanitary measures in the particular district, the struggle against tuberculosis, the protection of maternity and infancy, the protection of children's health, the struggle against occupational diseases, the struggle against infectious diseases, etc. The single dispensary carries over all these measures under a single plan; it seeks to organise the investigation of the diseased organism and to aid it from every possible angles. The Statistical and clinical data obtained on the different diseases are summed up in a single sanitary journal, on the basis of which measures are taken to improve the working and living conditions of the patient. The single dispensary keeps its eye not only upon the diseased, but also upon the healthy section of the population of its district, by carrying out regular medical examinations and taking various preventive measures on the basis of this investigation. The single dispensary has charge of all medical and preventive work in the particular district and is also the organization which plans the sanitation service. Thus the system of the single dispensaries combines the curative and the preventive aspects of the health service. (N. A. Semashko-Health Protection in the U. S. S. R). अनन्य औषधालय ।

Single District System. In the making of electoral districts there are two leading methods. One is to subdivide the total area into as many districts as there are representatives to be chosen, one member to be chosen from each. The other is to make a smaller number of areas from each of which several members are chosen, the number to the size of the district as compared with the total number of members to be chosen. The first of these methods is known as the single district system. एक जिला पद्धति ।

Single Tax. A term postulating the abolition of all taxes with the exception of one to be raised on land values. The scheme was first developed by Henry George, who defined the single tax as follows:—

"We hold that to tax land-values to their full amount will render it impossible for any man to exact from others a price for the privilege of using those bounties of nature in which all living men have an equal right of use, that it will compel every individual controlling natural opportunities to utilize them by employment of labour or abandonment to others, that it will thus provide opportunity of work to all men and secure to each the full reward of his labour. Social Contract. A term applied by political philosophers to a theory of society and the state which assumes that men lived originally in a "State of nature" where there was no society, no government, no compulsion of any organized variety. For various reasons men decided that by forming a political organization they would be happier and safer. This act was called a social contract, or social compact, and through it man leaves the "State of nature" and forms a state. The most important philosophers who used the "state of nature" and the social contract as the basis for their ideas concerning man, society, the state and government were the Frenchman Jean Jacques Rousseau and the Englishmen. Thomas Hobbes and John Locke. सामाजिक करार।

This party became the largest in Germany and in 1903. It sent 81 members to the Reichstag. In 1912 it sent 111 members to the Reichstag and had a powerful press at its disposal controlling nearly 100 newspapers and journals. At the outbreak of the European War it had a membership of over one million. In 1921 the party had 108 representatives in the Reichstag, and it defined its programme as follows:—

D. H. Cole).

Bakunin defined socialism as:—

"The organization of society in such a manner that every individual, man or woman, would at birth find equal means for the development of their respective faculties and their utilization by labour. The organisation of society in such a manner that the exploitation by one man of the labour of his fellow-men would be impossible and where everyone will be allowed to enjoy the social wealth only to the extent of his direct contribution to the production of that wealth."

"A state of superior civilization where all men, by means of easy work, will have a right to all the advantages of life. All for one, and one for all, such is the motto of socialism" (L. Bertrand).

"Socialism is any system which requires that the land and the instru-

समाजवाद; समाजसत्तावाद ।

Socialism, Christian- Christian socialism is socialism which applies the principles of Christianity to social problems, or socialism based upon the principles of the New Testament and the doctrines of Christ. The term was first used in England in 1849 and was invented by Maurice.

Christian Socialism, originated in England in 1848, when Charles Kingsley, Frederick Denison Maurice and others started the Christian socialist movement for the purpose of introducing Christianity as a guiding principle into every day life. They maintain that the germs of socialist, collectivist and even communist ideas are contained in Christianity, which preaches the brotherhood of man, mutual love and equality of all. Denouncing the rich and the idle, christianity praises the poor and impresses the idea of the dignity of labour.

The founders were also convinced that Christianity and socialism were closely connected, and that if man only obeyed divine laws all social abuses would disappear. The reigning industrial System and all its consequences would give way to a happy social system, if humanity would apply the teaching of Christianity to social life. (Dictionary of Socialism by Dr. Anglo S-Rappoport). ईसाई समाजवाद ।

Socialism, Fabian. (See Fabian Society)
फेबियन समाजवाद ।

Socialism, Guild. Guild socialism is a doctrine of industrial self-government or as it has been called 'functional democracy.' It accepts the normal socialist idea of communal ownership, but rejects state management, which, to the Guild Socialist, is a system of bureaucratic tyranny.

Guild Socialism aims not at the strength of Government, but at the limiting of its power.

Originally, it was an attempt to reintroduce the mediaeval independent guild system. Each industry was to be as self-contained as possible, and governed by its own craftsman. Modern condition, however, required national guilds, in order to control large scale industry. The guild socialists found in trade unions the raw material of their self-governing corporations.

From the political point of view Guild Socialism proposed to replace the state by a series of autonomous corporations of which government would be only one. The state would not be sovereign. It would have certain functions to perform of a political nature—defence, Control of marriage and divorce, the prevention of crime and the care of children. A superior co-ordinating authority would be required which was above both the guilds and government, this might be either a "democratic supreme Court of functional equity" or

"the Commune" which would have supreme powers". (Gilchrist). व्यवसाय संघ समाजवाद; कुलिक समाजवाद ।

Socialism, Revolutionary. Revolutionary socialism is that which aims at the complete upsetting of the present capitalist system of production by a definite revolution. क्रांतिकारी समाजवाद ।

Socialization. A term applied to the act by which the means of production will be handed over to the collectivity, thus transforming the capitalist into a collective system.

Socialization means the abolition of private and individual property and the introduction of collective property. Collectivists demand the socialization of the means of production only, whilst Communists wish to introduce the socialization both of the means of production and of the goods of consumption (cf. H. Strobel-Socialization in Theory and Practice). समाजीकरण ।

Sociology. Sociology is the science of society which deals with man in all his social relations. समाज-शास्त्र; समाज-विज्ञान ।

Sokol. Czech national gymnastic movement, 10,00,000 members. It has played a great part in the Czech national awakening in the 19th Century and in Czech public life to the present day (Dictionary of Political Terms).

Sovereign. A person, body or state in which independent and supreme power is vested. A chief ruler with supreme power. King. प्रभु; सर्वसत्ताधारी; सम्पूर्ण सत्ताधारी ।

A Sovereign Constituent Assembly. The Indian Independence Act scrapped the Cabinet Mission Plan and established the sovereign character of the Constituent Assembly on August 14, 1947. It reassembled to assume power for the government of India.

Sovereignty. The supreme power which governs the body-politic that constitutes state.

"Sovereignty is the supreme power inherent in a state by which the State is governed" (Wheaton).

The term "sovereignty" is derived from the latin 'Superanus' (Supreme, sovereign) and was first employed by Bodin in his celebrated work "De La Republique" published in 1576. The idea, however, is as old as Aristotle (see his politics III). Since Bodin first introduced the term into the literature of political science, the word and the idea, observes Blundschli, have exercised a vast influence on the development of constitutions and on the whole politics of modern times.

Definitions of sovereignty like definitions of the state are almost infinite in number. Bodin, the first writer to employ the term, defined it as 'the supreme power of the state over citizens and subjects, unrestrained by law.' Grotius, who wrote half a century later, defined it as:—"the supreme political power, whose acts are not subject to any other power and whose will cannot be over-ridden". Blackstone conceived it to be "the supreme, irresistible, absolute uncontrolled authority in which the Jura Summi Imperii reside". (Commentaries on the Laws of England). Justice story of the United States of America defined it in almost the same language. (see his commentaries on the constitution of the United States Vol. I).

Burgess characterizes it as 'original, absolute, unlimited power over the individual subjects and over all associations of subjects'.

According to Willoughby "Sovereignty is the supreme will of the State". President Woodrow Wilson has called it "the daily operative power of framing and giving efficacy to the laws". प्रभुता ।

Sovereignty De Facto. Lord Bryce defines the term as follows: "The person or body of persons who can make his and their will prevail whether with the law or against the law, he, or they is the de facto ruler, the person to whom obedience is actually paid".

"That person or body of persons who is in fact dominant in the state, who, for the time, receives the actual obedience of the great mass of the people, who constitutes the strongest power in the state, is the actual or de facto sovereign, though not necessarily a legal sovereign. The sovereign may be a usurping king, a self-constituted assembly, a military dictator, or even a priest or a prophet, in either case the sovereignty rests upon physical power or spiritual influence rather than upon legal right. History abounds in examples of such a sovereigns." वास्तविक प्रभुत्व; तथ्यतः प्रभुत्व ।

Sovereignty De Jure. De Jure sovereignty has its foundation in law not in physical power, and the person or body of persons by whom it is exercised can always show a legal right to rule. This is the sovereignty which the law recognises and to which it attributes the right to govern and exact obedience. विधानतः प्रभुत्व; कानूनी प्रभुत्व ।

Sovereignty, Legal. It represents the lawyer's conception of sovereignty, that is, sovereignty as the supreme law-making power. The legal sovereign, therefore, is that determinate authority which is able to express in a legal formula the highest commands of the state. Theoretically speaking, it can override the prescriptions of the divine law. the principles of morality and the mandates of public opinion. Whatever the supreme law-making body decrees, must be accepted as legal and must be applied by the courts. कानूनी प्रभुत्व; विधिजन्य प्रभुत्व ।

Sovereignty of Parliament. Prof. Dicey, one of the greatest authorities of English constitution says:— "the sovereignty of parliament is, from a legal point of view, the dominant characteristic of our political institutions. Any of my readers will remember that Parliament consists of the King, the House of Lords and the House of Commons acting together. The Principle, therefore, of parliamentary sovereignty means neither more nor less than this, namely, that "parliament" has the right to make right to make or unmake any law whatever, and further, that no person or body is recognized by the law of England as having a right to override or set aside the legislation of parliament and further that this right or power of Parliament extends to every part of the Kings dominions (Introduction to the Study of the Law of the Constitution by Dicey). संसद की प्रभुता; पार्लियामेन्ट की प्रभुता ।

Sovereignty of Parliament & its Positive side. Every legislative act of Parliament will be obeyed and enforced by the courts. It has supreme and unlimited legislative authority, which can be seen in a large number of instances, e. g. the Septennial Act, whereby the then Parliament extended its own life from three to seven years. It was a supreme display of legislative authority in as much as the members then constituting the House of Commons were elected to represent the nation only for three years. By extending their term of office, Parliament deprived the electors of the right of choosing better men in their places. It was direct usurpation of the rights of the people. This proves that from the view point of constitutional law, members once elected constitute a Parliament which is neither the agent nor the trustee for its constituents. Even the succession to the Throne is regulated by this body by an Act. It is legally the supreme legislative power in the state. This is so both with respect to public as well as private rights of the people. Parliament has habitually given privileges to particular persons or bodies imposing duties or liabilities upon other persons e. g. the Railway Acts or other local and Private Acts. Although private rights are held sacred, Parliament is entitled to interfere with them by such Acts. Such enactments being the legislation of illegality are the highest exertion and crowning proof of the sovereignty of Parliament.

Sovereignty, Political. Prof. Gilchrist defines the term as follows: "The political sovereign is the sum-total of the influences in a state which lie behind the law. In a modern representative government we might describe it roughly as the power of the people. It is the power behind the legal sovereign, but whereas the legal sovereign is definitely organised and discoverable, the political sovereignty is vague and indeterminate, though none the less real. राजनैतिक प्रभुत्व ।

Sovereignty, Popular The phrase "popular sovereignty" is not used in any real scientific sense. It roughly means the power of the masses as contrasted with the power of an individual ruler or of the classes (Gilchrist).

Sovereignty Titular. Titular sovereignty is the supremacy fictitiously attributed to a ruling prince, who personified the power and majesty of the state and on whose name the Government is conducted, the real sovereignty being in other hands. Thus the crowned heads of Europe are officially designated as 'Sovereigns' though of course they are only such in a nominal or titular sense (Garner-Introduction to Political Science). नाम मात्र की प्रभुता ।

Sovereignty Theory, Dual. This theory tells us that sovereignty admits of division and points out how such division takes place when several states combine and form a federation. The chief exponents of this theory were Hamilton and Madison who found in the organisation of the United States of America a division of sovereignty between the union and component States. The articles of confederation also conferred upon these States the status of independent sovereigns. द्वैध प्रभुत्व का सिद्धान्त ।

Soviet. System of Government obtaining in Russia. The word is Russian and means 'Council.' The soviet of Government is based fundamentally on the small soviet in workshop, factory, village or town. These basal units themselves elect delegates to similar congresses covering larger areas, the system culminating in the All Russian Congress of Soviets which delegates its powers to a Central Executive Committee. The supreme executive is the Council of Peoples Commissaries, drawn from this committee and its chairman is the titular head of the state.

On this theory government is from below, while executive decrees are transmitted from the central authority downwards, until they reach the executive or chairman of the village soviet by whom they are carried out.

Speaker. The speaker of the House of Commons is the member of the House through whom it communicates with the Sovereign, and who presides over the proceedings of the House and forces obedience to its orders. He is elected, subject to the approval of the Crown, on the first day that a new Parliament assembles.

The Lord Chancellor presides over the debates in the House of Lords but is not addressed as a Speaker.

(2) On the opening day of a new Parliament, the Commons elect one from amongst them as the Speaker of their House, at the instance of the Lord Chancellor. He acts as the Chairman, maintains order in the House, rules on points of order, names members guilty of disorder, signs Warrants of Committal for contempt and has a casting vote. He belongs to no party after his election as Speaker. His salary is £. 5000 per annum. अध्यक्ष ।

Special Session. A session of a legislative body called for a special purpose at a time other than a regular time for convening. विशेष अधिवेशन ।

State Aid. Financial assistance given by the government of the state. राज्य-सहायता ।

State. Definitions of the state are innumerable, almost every author having his own.

The English writer Holland defines a state as "numerous assemblage of human beings, generally occupying a certain territory among whom the will of the majority or of an ascertainable class of persons is by the strength of such a majority or class made to prevail against any of their number who oppose it" (Hall-Elements of Jurisprudence).

Again, Hall, viewing the state primarily as a concept of international law says,—“The marks of an independent state are that the community constituting it is permanently established for a political end, that it possesses a definite territory and that it is independent of external control”.

Phillimore says; “the state is a people permanently occupying a fixed territory bound together by common laws, habits and customs into one body-politic, exercising through the medium of an organised government, independent sovereignty and control over all persons and things within its boundaries, capable of making war and peace and of entering into all international relations with the communities of the globe”.

According to Bluntschli, the well-known German author:—“the state is a combination or association of men in the form of government and governed, on a definite territory, united together into a moral organised masculine personality, or more shortly, the state is the politically organised national person of a definite country”.

Mr. Ramsay Macdonald defines the state as;—“The political personality of the whole community, both in its internal and external relationship. (J. Ramsay Macdonald-Socialism and Government).

Professor Burgess of Columbia University, New York, one of the Greatest modern authorities on political science says that “the state is a particular portion of mankind viewed as an organised unity”.

Dr. Willoughby, a great American authority on the subject says;—“That the state exists where-ever there can be discovered in any community of men a supreme authority exercising a control over the social actions of individuals and groups of individuals and itself subject to no such regulations”.

Laski, the great socialist writer defines the state:—“The state, so to say, is the crowning point of the modern social edifice, and it is in its superemacy over all other forms of social grouping that its special nature is to be found. The state is thus a way of regulating human conduct”.

“It lays down a system of imperatives and uses coercion to secure obedience to them. From its own standpoint, the validity of those imperatives is self-derived. They are legal not because they are good, or just, or wise, but because they are its imperatives. They are the legal expression of the way in which men should act as laid down by the authority, which is alone competent to make final decisions of this kind” (An introduction to Politics by Laski).

According to Professor Barker the state is “the impartial and mediating authority which corrects the individualism of society in the light of the common interest” (Political thoughts of Plato and Aristotle by Prof. Barker). राज्य ।

States, Council of. Like all other federal states, the Indian constitution envisages a bi-cameral system. The Council of states, as its name implies, will be a representative chamber of the States, the constitutional units of the Indian Union. Its maximum strength is 250, that is, half that of the House of the People. Out of these, 12 member will be nominated by the President from amongst well-known personalities in the realm of arts and letters, science and social service. The rest will be representatives of the States. The allocation of seats to the representatives of the states in the Council of States will be in accordance with specific provisions. राज्य-परिषद् ।

Federal State (Indian Constitution). India is described in the Draft constitution as a Union of States. It is in fact a Federation and has all the characteristics of the latter, namely (1) a written constitution (2) a clear demarcation of powers between the units and the centre and (3) the existence of a supreme court to settle disputes between the centre and the constituent units.

The Draft Constitution thus establishes a dual policy with the “union at the centre and the states at the periphery, each endowed with sovereign power to be exercised in the field assigned to them respectively by the Constitution.” The proposed Union is not a League of States, nor are the States creatures of the Union deriving their powers from it. In this respect it conforms to the American, Canadian and Australian constitutions and differs from the Constitution of Great Britain.

A modern state needs uniformity in administration and the right to direct all activities from the centre according to a single plan executed uniformly. The Draft Constitution preserves this basic unity and uniformity in administration by three things (1) a single judiciary (2) uniformity in fundamental, civil and criminal laws, and (3) common all India civil services. संघ-राज्य।

State, Despotic. A State in which the sovereign authority is vested in one individual who governs according to his own caprice. स्वेच्छाचारी राज्य।

State, Theory of the Liberal. This theory is a very old theory. It goes to associate with the State a sovereign power which gives orders to all and receives order from none. This assumption of sovereign power by the State is a matter of necessity. In the absence of such power there will be chaos and confusion within the state. The assumption of sovereign power and the claim to obedience on the part of the state in which liberal democracy is in vogue had been in the past justified for the following reasons, Viz. (1) it secured order; (2) it introduced a peaceful change, (3) it helped the satisfaction of demand on the largest possible. उदार-राज्य का सिद्धान्त।

State Policy, Directive Principles of (Indian Constitution). The chapter in the draft constitution dealing with the directive principles of State Policy is a unique feature of our Constitution. Its inclusion was found necessary in the context of the Indian situation and the only parallel that can be cited in this respect is the Constitution of the Republic of Ireland. The word directive in the constitution is used to lay down certain directions to the future legislature and the executive, showing the manner in which they have to exercise their authority. They are meant to be codes of constitutional propriety which will govern the future government in relation to the people. These principles are meant to be an active and imperative basis of State policy.

The expression "State" however, has a dual meaning. As a collective entity, it represents the Government and Parliament of India and the Government and the legislature of each state. In a distributive sense it implies even the village panchayats, district boards and other local bodies. राज्य की नीति के निर्देशक सिद्धान्त।

States, Universal. The modern political thinkers deal with the evils of national states and favour the substitution of these states by one universal state. The universal state thus established will avoid international disputes and stand for general peace and prosperity. It will bring about uniform regulation in the sphere of industry and commerce. The sovereignty of the states will be ignored and people of the world will become the citizens of one State which is sovereign. The citizens will enjoy equal rights and privileges and have the same voice in the administration of the affairs of the State. विश्वराज्य।

State, the Utilitation Theory of the. According to this theory the State exists for "the greatest happiness of the greatest number." Every action of the State should be directed to promote the general happiness of the people. Laws promulgated by the State should have for their object the happiness of the general mass of the population. Again, this theory justifies the sacrifice of the well-being and comforts of a particular individual to those of the mass of population. राज्य का उपयोगितावादी सिद्धान्त।

Statelessness. The condition of being without a State or legal nationality. अराजकता।

This is to be effected by gradually nationalising the means of production, especially the big enterprises, such as railways, mines, banks, tramways, factories, etc.

The term state socialism may, therefore, be applied to the Social policy which requires the state to take certain measures in the interest of the masses and thus limit the economic liberty of individuals. राज्य-समाजवाद ।

Static Policy. A policy which resists change in the existing status quo. स्थिरनीति; अपरिवर्तनशील नीति । alteration in the existing law, but merely to declare or explain what it is, (2) remedial, when they alter the common law, (3) amending, when they alter the statute law; (4) consolidating, when they consolidate several previous statutes relating to the same subject matter, with or without alterations of substance, (5) disabling or restraining, when they restrain the alienation of property (6) enabling when they remove a restriction or disability (7) penal. when they impose a penalty or forfeiture. संविधि; अनुविधि ।

A statute law is the written expression of the legislative will. It is the positive declaration of what the law shall be by that branch of the government possessing legislative functions, as distinguished from the executive and judicial functions of co-ordinate branches, व्यवस्थापित विधान ।

Statute of Westminster. As a result of the various resolutions passed by the Imperial Conferences held in 1926 and 1930 and to give legal sanction to the same, the Statute of Westminster 1931, (22 Goe. 5. ch. 4.) was passed by British Parliament. It lays down mainly that (1) any alteration in the law, touching the succession to the Throne or the Royal Style and Title shall hereafter require assent of the legislatures of all the Dominions (2) no law hereafter made by the British Parliament shall extend to any of the Dominions as part of the law of that Dominion, and (3) the Parliament of a Dominion has full power to make laws having extra-territorial operation. It will be evident, that the Act limits the extent of the sovereignty of the British Parliament so far as the self-governing Dominions are concerned and almost reduces it to a nullity. As an illustration, one instance may be cited. The Irish Free State abolished (1) the right to appeal to the Privy Council and (2) the obligation by the members of the Legislature to take an oath of allegiance. Lord Sankey, the then Lord Chancellor, upheld the action of the Irish Free State. Some Dominions also claim the right of cessation.

(2) Passed as a result of Imperial Conferences in 1926 and 1930 to give effect, primarily, to the principle that no law thereafter made by the Parliament of the United Kingdom should extend to any of the Dominions, otherwise than at the request and with the consent of that Dominion. By section 2 no Dominion legislation after 1931 is void or inoperative on the ground of repugnancy to the law of England and a Dominion Parliament has power to repeal Imperial Legislation in so far as it is part of the law of the Dominion. By section 4 no Imperial legislation is to extend to a Dominion as part of the law of the Dominion, unless it is expressly declared in the act that the Dominion has requested and consented to the enactment.

Later sections contain savings for the protection of the Constitutions of the Dominions.

I hope to demonstrate that real Swaraj will come not by the acquisition of authority by a few but by the acquisition of the capacity by all to resist authority when abused. In other words, Swaraj is to be attained by educating the masses to a sense of their capacity to regulate and control authority.

In reality, the Chancellor is concerned only with the direction and policy-framing and not with the actual administration of the department. The functions of the collection of revenue and disbursement of money are discharged under the direct supervision of the Comptroller and Auditor-General. Subordinate to the Treasury are the four great offices. (1) Post Office, (2) Customs, (3) Inland Revenue and (4) Woods, Forests and Land Revenues. Exchequer and all national disbursements are made out of the fund so collected and known as the 'Consolidated Fund.' Most of the taxes are imposed by permanent statutes but some are laid afresh every year and are liable to annual revision. Similarly, some expenditures are regulated by standing laws and others by annual appropriations. Most disbursements fall in the latter category, only those which it is particularly desirable to keep out of politics, e. g. the Civil List, the salaries of the judges, the interest on national debt, etc aggregating to about one forth of the total expenditure, are paid without annual authorisation. Unitary Government. If the powers of the government are concentrated in one supreme organ, or organs, that are located at one common centre, and from which all local governing authorities derive their existence and powers, the government is both unitary and centralized. In such a system there is a single common source of authority, and hence one supreme authority is exerted. For convenience of administration the territory of the state may be subdivided into circumscriptions of districts, in each of which a local government may be established and to which certain powers of local character may be delegated by the Central Government. These local organisations are nothing more than parts of the Central Government created to act as its agents. एक सत्तात्मक शासन या सरकार ।

Union of States (Indian Constitution), Under the Draft Constitution India becomes a Union of States. This implies the indestructible nature of its unity. Its people a single people, living under a single imperium derived from a single source."

The word 'States' denotes all the units whether provinces, the chief commissioners' provinces, the state unions, the centrally administered states or other Indian states. This multiplicity of units is the legacy of the British regime. Thanks, however, to the process of integration and democratization, the difference in the status, constitution and the administration of the various units, especially of the Indian States, is rapidly disappearing India can thus look forward to becoming, in the near future, a union of homogeneous States. रियासती संघ; राज्य-संघ ।

Untouch-ability (Abolition of). Our Constitution also puts the legal stamp on the great social revolution brought about by Mahatma Gandhi It uplifts about 50 million untouchables of India from their age-old low social status. It lays down that 'untouchability' is abolished and its practice, in any form, is forbidden. The enforcement of any disability arising out of "untouchability" shall be an offence punishable in accordance with law". To many this single clause, outlawing untouchability, is more precious than all the rights of equality guaranteed under the Constitution. It puts an end to the most degrading of social inequalities that have vitiated Hindu society. Such social customs and disabilities, as enforced segregation of "untouchables" at wells, in streets, schools and places of worship, are declared illegal. In fact, the ban covers all forms of untouch-ability, specified or unspecified. Some of the prevalent social disabilities are tabooed and equality in public places is guaranteed to all people. It is provided that, "No citizens shall on grounds only of religion, race, caste, sex, place of birth or any of them, be subject to any disability, restriction or condition with regard to (a) access to shops, public restaurants, hotels and places of public entertainment, or (b) the use of wells, tanks, bathing ghats, roads and places of public resort, maintained, wholly or partly, out of State funds or dedicated to the use of the general public".

Village Swaraj. Mahatma Gandhi says.

"My idea of village Swaraj is that it is a complete republic, independent of its neighbours for its vital wants, and yet interdependent for many others in which dependence is a necessity. Thus every village's first concern will be to grow its own food, crops and cotton for its cloth. It should have a reserve for its cattle, recreation and playground for adults and children. Then, if there is more land available, it will grow useful money crops, thus excluding ganja, tobacco, opium and the like. The village will maintain a village theatre, school and public hall. It will have its own water-works ensuring clean supply. This can be done through controlled wells and tanks. Education will be compulsory up to final basic course. As far as possible every activity will be conducted on the co-operative basis. There will be no castes such as we have today with their graded untouchability. Non-violence with its technique of satyagraha and non-cooperation will be the sanction of the village community. There will be a compulsory service of village guards who will be selected by rotation from the register maintained by the village. The Government of the village will be conducted by the Panchayat of five persons, annually elected by the adult villagers, male and female, possessing minimum prescribed qualifications. These will have all the authority and jurisdiction required. Since there will be no system of punishments, in the accepted sense, this Panchayat will be the legislature, judiciary and executive combined to operate for its year of office. Any village can become such a republic today without much interference, even from the present Government whose sole effective connection with the villages is the exaction of the village revenue. I have not examined here the question of relations with the neighbouring villages and the centre if any. My purpose is to present an outline of village government. Here there is perfect democracy based upon individual who is the architect of his own government. The law of non-violence rules him and his government. He and his village are able to defy the might of a world. For the law governing every village is that he will suffer death in the defence of his and his village's honour." ग्राम-स्वराज्य ।

candidates. The election then takes place and each voter is allowed to cast many votes, if there are seats vacant but he must give his vote to the whole list en bloc. The electoral quota is determined by dividing the total number of votes by the number of seats. The number of representatives, to which a particular party is entitled, is determined by dividing the votes, cast in favour of the candidates of that party, by the electoral quotient. The deficiency is supplied by the party having the largest fractional quotas. सूचि मतदान पद्धति।

Vote system, the Cumulative. This system attempts to secure representation of minorities by allowing the elector to cast all his votes in favour of a particular candidates. If a constituency is to return three candidates each elector will have three votes. These three votes can be given to a particular candidate. In this way the minority party is given a chance of getting some representatives by cumulating the votes of its members on the party candidate एकत्रित मतदान पद्धति।
